Political Parties Open Campaign to Obtain Strength

Washington, July 22 (AP).—The rapid pace of the presidential campaign is forcing toward decision these two highly interesting and possible dominating questions of party strategy:

How far will the Republicans go toward an affirmative bid for the prohibition vote, and how far will the Democrats go in seeking the support of the west at the sacrifice of certain strength in the east.

Await Hoover's Speech

For the answer to the first of these questions, the country is looking to President Hoover's acceptance speech August 11. As he begins its preparation, he is besieged on the one hand by pleas that he show a definite personal inclination to the dry side, at the same time that he accepts the submission plank adopted at Chicago; and on the other hand by advisers who think the party ought to cut loose entirely from the organized drys, and stand for submission and nothing else.

It probably is true that not one of the President's intimates knows today what he will decide to say. He is listening to both sides, and keeping his own thoughts to himself. All that can be said with certainty is that he has no intention of declaring for repeal, or even by inference putting himself definitely on the extreme anti-prohibition side of the case.

Similarly, many politicians expect Governor Roosevelt to indicate whether he intends to follow the strategy adopted by his running mate, Speaker Garner, in the closing days of the session of Congress and in the home-coming speeches in Texas.

Garner's Attack

Garner's thrusts at "Wall Street," and his denunciation of President Hoover as the special friend of big business, have aroused questionings among many eastern Democrats. Already Republican speakers have sought to attach the tag of "radical" to the Roosevelt-Garner ticket, and have used the utterances of the Democratic vice presidential nominee in the hope of frightening the east.

Only indirectly has Governor Roosevelt indicated what his own ideas as to political geography are. By his conferences with Massachusetts Democrats, and by his dispatch of Chairman James A. Farley into New Jersey yesterday on a peace-making session, the nominee has shown he has no intention of waging a campaign aimed solely at southern and western electoral votes.

Much higher interest attaches, however, to what the governor actually says in his future addresses and whether Speaker Garner, after his fishing trip, resumes his speech-making where he left off.

Asks Party Harmony.

Farley's New Jersey speech did not touch the big business issue. It was an appeal for party harmony, addressed not alone to the Hague organization in New Jersey. Its complimentary references to John J. Raskob and Jouett Shouse were calculated to reach the ears of those in all states who stood against Roosevelt's nomination. It will be on the state leaders, more than usual, that the Democratic campaign will rest under a plan of decentralized management worked out at Albany.

Another question still to be decided is whether the Democrats will make a concerted attack on the St. Lawrence waterway treaty signed this week in Washington. Governor Roosevelt has indicated a feeling that the interests of New York state were not sufficiently considered by the administration in Washington, and there are rumblings of dissent among some western senators. The form of this treaty may become an important campaign issue, but the situation still is too nebulous for definite prediction.

That the governor intends to do something about the waterpower issue, from the St. Lawrence angle or some other, is indicated by the conferences he has been holding with his home state advisers. He also has gone into the farm relief situation, coupled by some with the water power question, in talks with farm bureau federation officials, but the results appear indefinite.

ROOSEVELT WILL GET WALKER'S ANSWER SOON

Albany, N. Y., July 22 (AP)—A week of busy state conferences over, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt planned to proceed late today to his residence at Hyde Park where he expects to receive and peruse the Walker reply this week-end.

It has now been several weeks since the governor asked the mayor of New York to reply to the charges of Samuel Seabury that he used his office for personal gain. Two weeks ago, before departing on his coast-wise cruise, the governor sought to prompt Walker by reminding him that his answer must be delivered aboard the executive's yawl at one of his overnight stops in New England.

Roosevelt has waited all this week and Seabury postponed a European trip to see what action he will take.

The capitol now has heard that the mayor's communication will be delivered at Hyde Park.

Wins Fourth Race.

Cowes, Isle of Wight, July 22 (AP).—The United States six-meter fleet today won the fourth race of the series for the British-America cup to sweep the regatta and successfully defend the international yachting trophy.

Sudden Storm Turns Lake Into Death Trap

Pontiac, Mich., July 22 (AP)—A placid lake transformed suddenly by high winds into a death trap was being dragged today for the bodies of at least ten persons believed to have perished as they were seeking relief from a hot summer day.

One body was recovered last night before darkness stopped the search.

The body was that of a white man, William Burns, about 25, of Detroit. Nine negroes, two of them women, are missing and believed to have perished. There was no assurance that the list of missing was complete and estimates of the dead ranged as high as 14.

The storm which brought relief to a sweltering community descended suddenly. Occupants of the 100 row-boats dotting the water pulled frantically for shelter from the waves, which rose six feet high. The small lake—known as Pontiac Lake—is seven miles west of here and draws crowds from the Detroit area.

Before sheets of rain and hail shut out the scene from witnesses on shore, they saw several persons struggling in the water—four from one boat.

Claims Bike Without Lights Caused Crash

Paul Sherin, 43, of Highland, was found, badly injured and dazed, in a demonstrating car belonging to Percy Mott, the Esopus garage man, about 9 o'clock Thursday night. Sherin's car had struck a tree near the Colonel Payne estate, at West Park, about three miles from Esopus.

The injured man was taken to the Kingston Hospital by M. Solomon of 37 Lafayette avenue and H. Rubivanet of 41 Newkirk avenue, who were coming to Kingston and happened along shortly after the accident. It was found that he had sustained three fractured ribs, a cut on the forehead that took eight stitches to close, a cut on the nose and cuts about the breast and on the elbows.

Sherin had recovered sufficiently to tell his story this morning, which was to the effect that he had left the garage and was driving to his home in Highland when at the scene of the accident he noticed a motorcycle parked along the road and which he says had no lights. He swerved his car to the left and then back to the right, but turned too sharply and left the road, striking the tree. The motorcycle was struck and hurled over the fence and into the field. It was later found to be registered in the name of Watson Drake of Ulster Park.

The sheriff's office was notified and Deputy Albrecht made an investigation.

Investigate Deaths Of Two Farm Girls

Lake City, Minn., July 22 (AP).—Aid of clinic specialists at Rochester was enlisted today by authorities seeking the cause of the mysterious deaths of Louise Prigge and Frances Polikowski, both 22.

The scantily clad bodies of the young women were found 22 miles from here—that of Miss Prigge in the Zumbro river and that of her chum, who had been visiting at the Prigge farm, on the river bank a half mile away.

They were last seen alive Tuesday night when two men called at the Prigge home near Rochester, to take them for an automobile ride. Only the first name of one of the men was known although Louise was said to have gone out several times with him.

The internal organs were sent to Rochester for examination.

Campers took the body of Miss Prigge from the river and several hours later that of the other girl, who lived in Rochester, was found. The coroner said there were no outward marks of violence.

Some investigators said it was possible that an argument preceded the death of one and that the other was slain to hide the identity of the men.

County Conventions Here In Augest

The unofficial county conventions of the Republican and Democratic parties will be held at the Ritz Theatre on Pine Grove avenue next month. The date fixed for the Republican convention is August 6, and the Democrats will meet on August 9.

This year the local ticket will consist of senator, assemblyman, surrogate, sheriff and coroner.

HENRY "RED" JOHNSON DEPORTED TO NORWAY

New York, July 22 (AP)—Henry (Red) Johnson, former sailor suitor of Betty Gow, the kidnaped Lindbergh baby's nursemaid, is on his way to Norway. Before he sailed yesterday an unidentified girl kissed him goodbye.

Since he was cleared of any knowledge of the kidnaping, he has been held at Ellis Island for alleged illegal entry into the country. Whether he will be allowed to return was not disclosed.

Judge Culloton Gives Opinion In Labor Law Action Against Gold

Charge That Door to Building Was Locked During Working Hours Made by H. M. Geer.

City Judge Bernard A. Culloton has handed down a decision, with accompanying opinion, in the matter of The People of the State of New York against Sam Gold. The action is one for violation of the Labor Law and on information of H. M. Geer it charges that a door in the factory building located at 495 Broadway was locked in violation of the Labor Law provisions. The matter was tried before Judge Culloton in city court on July 5 at which time A. J. Cook appeared for Mr. Gold. Judge Culloton has dismissed the complaint and discharged the defendant. The following interesting opinion is handed down:

City Court: City of Kingston, County of Ulster; State of New York
The People of the State of New York
on the information of H. M. Geer, against
Sam Gold.

Opinion.

The defendant is charged with a violation of Subdivision 3, of Section 272, of the Labor Law, wherein it is stated that no door leading into or out of any factory or any floor thereof shall be locked, bolted or fastened during working hours.

The proof showed the defendant to be part owner of a factory building occupied by two or more tenant factory owners. The particular instance relied upon as a violation, is the fact that a door in the rear of the said building and at the foot of the stairway leading down from the second and third floors of said building was locked at a time when employes of a factory located on the second floor were working. The proof further shows that a tenant occupying the first floor of said factory building was the person who had actually locked the door at or about one (1) o'clock in the afternoon of the day in question and had done so of his own volition and without the actual knowledge of the defendant herein.

At this point, after reading the first sentence of Subdivision 3 of Section 272, a violation of the provisions of that section of the Labor Law is shown. The question remaining is, whether or not this defendant is chargable with the violation.

Section 316 of the Labor Law defines the duties of owners and occupiers. Subdivision two (2) of that section reads as follows: "The owner of a tenant-factory buildings, whether or not he is also one of the occupants instead of the respective tenants, shall be responsible for the observance of the following provisions of this article, 'Section two hundred seventy-two (272), additional requirements for all buildings, except subdivision one (1), and the first three sentences of subdivision three (3). * * * This exception to the duties of the owners clearly exonerates the defendant herein from the violation charged in the information, since the violation is contained in the first sentence of subdivision three (3) of Section two hundred and seventy-two (272). It is contended, however, on behalf of the People that the last paragraph of subdivision two (2) of section three hundred and sixteen (316), removes the owner from the protection of the exceptions cited earlier in the same section, the paragraph reading as follows: 'The owner shall also be responsible for all other provisions of this article in so far as they affect those portions of the tenant-factory buildings or its premises that are used in common or by more than one occupant.' It is neither reasonable nor logical that the intent of the Legislature was to set forth in one and the same paragraph a series of exceptions to the provisions of the law governing owners and, without further exception or interpretation, to remove from the law these same exceptions. It is only reasonable and logical to assume that the legislature, by the use of the words, 'All other provisions,' meant those which are not specifically set forth in the preceding paragraph. In view of this, the defendant herein is charged with a violation of the provisions of the Labor Law, which has been specifically declared not to be chargeable against him.

The motion on the part of the defendant for a dismissal is hereby granted and the defendant is discharged.

Judge of the City Court,

VON GRONAU BEGINS AIR TRIP TO AMERICA

List, Island of Sylt, Germany, July 22 (AP)—Wolfgang Von Gronau, German aviator, took off from here this morning on a flight to the United States by way of Iceland, Greenland and Labrador.

It is his second westward flight across the Atlantic. On August 25, 1930, he became the first German to reach the port of New York by air.

Captain Von Gronau took off at 11 a. m. His first scheduled stop is Iceland.

His goal is Chicago and his first stop on the North American continent is expected to be Montreal. He also planned to return to Germany by air.

Differences Arise Among Members at Imperial Conference

Ottawa, Ont., July 22 (AP)—The Irish Free State and the Union of South Africa gave indication of balking at the principle of preference tariff dealing as the Imperial conference settled down to work today.

In the objection of the Irish Free State, as voiced by Sean T. O'Kelly, head of the delegation, there was an echo of the brewing tariff war between the Free State and Great Britain over President De Valera's refusal to pay land annuities to Great Britain.

"Special difficulties," O'Kelly said, have recently arisen which affect about 85 per cent of our external trade and which may involve substantial changes in the form and direction of that trade, as well as the economic structure of the country."

N. C. Havenga, South African Minister of Finance, emphasized that South Africa could not subscribe to the theory of a self-contained and isolated British Empire.

"None of its members," he said, "can exist by trade within the commonwealth alone. If our industries are to survive, tariff walls are inevitable, but it is our duty to see how far they can be lowered or where preferential entries can be made through those walls."

Approve of Bennett

For the rest of the Dominions the blunt proposal of Prime Minister Bennett of Canada, made in opening the conference, to lower Canada's own tariff walls for British Empire products, was received with approval, at least in principle.

Stanley Baldwin, head of the British delegation, warned that Great Britain would have to keep world trade in mind and that "however great our resources, we cannot isolate ourselves from the rest of the world."

The heads of delegations decided to appoint five committees to map out the work of the conference. There will be committees of promotion of trade within the commonwealth, customs administration, commercial relations with foreign countries, monetary and financial questions and methods of economic co-operation.

Each delegation will meet separately to nominate members to serve on these committees.

Last night Canada entertained the delegates at a great state dinner, presided over by Prime Minister Bennett.

American observers noted with particular interest Mr. Bennett's change in front since the 1930 conference at London, which broke up when he refused tariff preference proposals which would have permitted Great Britain to cut in on Canadian industries.

Now, however, with Great Britain equipped with a tariff policy of her own and able to dictate terms, Bennett seemed ready to offer to make industrial sacrifices to save the Canadian farmers, who contribute 65 per cent of the exports to Great Britain even now and in normal times 80 per cent.

Farm Products.

Even with the present low prices for farm products the Canadian farmers accounted for 36 per cent of the Dominion's entire income from exports during the last fiscal year.

One of the most important subjects in the agricultural discussion is bacon. It was understood today a proposal to place a tariff on foreign bacon entering Great Britain is being considered seriously and it was believed here that a substantial preference to the dominions would be a great boon to the packing industry of Canada.

The principle request from the Canadian livestock industry is that the restrictions against Canadian cattle entering British markets be removed, so as to place Canada's cattle on the same basis as Irish cattle. In live cattle, Ireland is Canada's only real competitor in the British market.

Canada already dominated the market for cheese and fear was expressed in some quarters that if a tariff were placed on butter it might turn foreign countries to producing cheese instead of butter and that, in that way, Canada might lose more than she gained.

In connection with the fruit industry, the belief prevailed that a preference tariff on various canned fruits will be urged for the dominions. Canada has too much to lose in British restrictions on her raw products to hold out against a slight modification of the protection thrown around her industries.

Industries Willing.

Instances are not lacking where the Canadian manufacturer is willing to have his protection adjusted a little in return for a promise of agricultural prosperity that would guarantee his market at home, but he is not willing to yield up any considerable share of the field in which he already is established and whose needs he feels competent to serve.

Much the same is true of the other dominions, although they appeared to realize that unless they make some sacrifice of industry Great Britain probably would protect herself by negotiating trades with non-empire countries.

The more important dominions are wheat producers and they want to preserve themselves in a market which is contested by the United States and Argentina. Great Britain's answer is that if she is to take more empire wheat she must have a wider outlet for home products, even including British-made motion picture films.

Scotland is boosting Empire preference because the Scottish sheep farmers believe Canada could take 2,000,000 pounds of wool right away if the duties were lowered. The United States formerly was a good customer, until tariff barriers intervened.

Australia is interested in exports of wheat, wool, meat, butter and dried fruits, all of which could be shipped to the Empire nations by the United States if Great Britain chose to deal with America if the dominions should fail to make this conference an aid to British trade cohesion.

U. S. Probers Score The Third Degree as Practiced by Police

New York, July 22 (AP)—The third degree, which a Nassau county grand jury continued today to study in connection with the death of a prisoner last week, was found by President Hoover's commission on law enforcement to have left vivid welts on police bodies throughout America.

(Thirteen policemen of the Nassau county force have been suspended as a result of the death of Hyman Stark, a prisoner, from injuries allegedly suffered at the hands of the officers. The grand jury began hearing evidence yesterday.)

The Hoover commission, headed by George W. Wickersham, wrote one of its lengthiest and most detailed reports in reciting hundreds of incidents of "lawlessness in law enforcement" to have left a black public record throughout America.

Common Methods.

The most common methods employed in the third degree, the commission found, were: Punching in the face, hitting with a club, whipping with a rubber hose, kicking in the abdomen and tightening the necktie almost to the choking point.

(The prisoner Stark died from a broken larynx; and his body was severely bruised, as by pummelling.)

One of the authorities quoted by the commission reported Officer Fiaschetti, a former head of the New York police Italian squad, as saying:

"I went to the Tombs and got myself a sawed off baseball bat and walked in on all those dogs. They came through with everything they knew."

A former district attorney told the commission:

"I know of one case in which the punishment was so severe that a police surgeon stood by and at intervals took the pulse of the prisoner and gave advice as to whether he could stand more beating."

Florida Case

In Miami, Fla., the commission reported, a prisoner named Deiterle, held for wife murder, was chained throughout the night, to the floor of a cell infested by mosquitoes. During the following day Deiterle was harrassed by persistent questioning, during all of which, the commission added, the scalp of his murdered wife was kept constantly before his eyes.

The New York city police in 1930 were charged with 289 cases of beating prisoners. Out of 1,285 cases studied by the Legal Aid Society during that period, this represented 23 per cent.

Tony Colletti, 18, was questioned for 26 hours by Cleveland, O., police holding him for the murder of his young bride. So at least the commission was advised. Under beatings, the commission found, he finally confessed, but repudiated the confession after having a chance to consult a lawyer. His attorney, shocked by the third degree charges, found five witnesses to corroborate the story and announced he would expose the police methods at Colletti's trial.

Trial Never Held

The trial never was held. On the day set for it Colletti's body was found hanged in his cell.

Often the bruises resulting from the third degree are explained by the statement that the prisoner "fell down stairs." The commission report notes sarcastically in this connection: "Prisoners frequently fall down stairs; officers do not."

The commission states bluntly:

"The third degree is widely and brutally employed in New York city."

It quotes several former district attorneys, one, R. H. Elder, as saying:

"The third degree has now become established and recognized practice in New York. Every police station of the city is equipped with instruments to administer torture incident to that process."

PICKETS LIFT SIEGE ON HOOSIER MINE.

Dugger, Ind., July 22 (AP)—More than a thousand union sympathizers whose presence about the Hoosier coal mine held 27 unorganized workmen in the shaft for two days, slowly broke camp early today as officials supervised removal of the besieged diggers.

Under terms of an agreement reached at a conference last night between Governor Harry G. Leslie and representatives of the two labor groups, the mine will be maintained, but temporarily will not be worked. It has been running on a cooperative basis, to which unionized groups objected.

E. H. Mabee Dead

Niagara Falls, N. Y., July 22 (AP)—Eugene H. Mabee, 75, retired deputy collector of customs, died today after a long illness. He had been in the customs service 37 years, retiring several years ago. Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon and burial will be in Gasport, Mr. Mabee's birthplace.

Gangs Begin War on Organized Labor

Chicago, July 22 (AP)—Gangster hands which sought control of Chicago labor unions were pointed by police today as wielders of the machine gun which killed Patrick Berrell, labor leader, and Willie Marks, his bodyguard in a Wisconsin resort.

A union labor spokesman, commenting on the murders, said "the gangsters have begun a new war on organized labor."

Authorities accelerated their hunt for James "Fur" Sammons, released from Joliet prison only last Saturday after limitation. They were convinced the double slaying at Shawano, Wis., was reprisal for the month old killing of George "Red" Barker, pal of Sammons who through guns and hoodlums had usurped domination of a large group of labor organizations.

Berrell, vice president of the International Brotherhood of stable men, helpers and teamsters, was shot to death as he stepped outside the Shawano roadhouse early yesterday. Marks was a relative of the notorious George "Bugs" Moran. He missed death by five minutes in the St. Valentine's day extermination of the Moran mob in 1929. He was killed yesterday as he ran to Berrell's aid. The killers fled in an automobile.

Gigantic Relief Measure Signed

Washington, July 22 (AP)—A mighty federal hand holding food for the hungry, work for the jobless and new energy for business extends today into every corner of the land—the new relief bill is law.

It was signed yesterday by President Hoover, without comment, so the reconstruction finance corporation immediately could begin placing it $1,500,000,000 in new funds where the money would do the most good.

Mr. Hoover delayed final approval of the bill several days after he publicly called it a "step toward recovery." One reason for the postponement was to let the corporation prepare for a flood of loan applications already on the way to the capital, promising that before long money would begin to be spent on the things that the President and Congress alike thought would be beneficial.

The new law—

Makes $300,000,000 available for loans to states to relieve unemployment distress; increases funds of the corporation from $2,000,000,000 to $3,800,000,000; allocates $1,500,000,000 for public construction and self-liquidating private loans, the financing of agriculture through credit corporations; allows $120,000,000 for federal highway aid advances to states; permits expenditure of $16,000,000 on national parks and forest roads and trails; makes possible the use of $186,224,000 for public buildings and waterway improvement when the treasury condition permits.

Likewise, it lets the Federal Reserve banks, subject to approval of there Reserve Board, discount eligible paper for individuals and corporations.

West Point Soldiers Killed In Crash

Private Harold W. Clarke, 29, and Private George L. Knepper, both stationed at West Point, were killed in an automobile accident Thursday afternoon on the Astor Flats at Rhinebeck. Passing a gasoline truck, the soldiers' car collided with one driven by Frank H. Creedon of Slate Hill, Orange county. The two soldiers were driving north in their Chevrolet coupe and crashed head-on into the car of Creedon bound south. Creedon was also injured but not seriously. Clarke was removed to the Rhinebeck Hospital where he died. Knepper was killed almost instantly when he was pinned under the coupe he was driving.

Veterans Vacate In Large Numbers

Washington, July 22 (AP)—Orders for veterans to evacuate government property within the next two weeks today sent members of the bonus army flocking to the veterans' administration to secure transportation home.

One line in front of the building had over 200 men in it and another line entering from a side street contained 500 bonus seekers.

At 9 o'clock today a total of 4,223 veterans had applied for transportation. Arrangements were made to keep the administration building open tonight and tomorrow night if necessary.

The time for veterans to get government funds to go back home expires at midnight July 25.

TWO NEGROES FOUND ASLEEP IN RAILROAD BOX CAR

George Henderson, 38, of Chicago, and Clarence Brown, 23, of Buffalo, two negroes who said they arrived in town late Thursday night, were found asleep in a former Ulster & Delaware railroad box car near Grand street by Officer Dempsey. This morning in police court Judge de la Vergne sentenced each to five days in the county jail.

Four Railroads Hold Future of Proposed Consolidation Plan

New Plan for Consolidation of Eastern Railroads into Four Great Systems is up to Carriers—Commissions Idea.

Washington, July 22 (AP)—A new consolidation plan for the unification of scores of eastern railroads into four great systems now rests with the carriers.

It was put before them late yesterday by the interstate commerce commission which sought by yielding on some points and making new suggestions to end years of wrangling over how consolidations should be effected to preserve competition, serve the public and save money.

The plan was not the commission's original proposal just exactly two years ago and seven months earlier for the establishment of five eastern trunk lines; it was not the railroads' suggestion last October 1 for four systems; it contained some concessions and new allocations the commission hoped would be accepted.

By the new plan, carriers would be grouped under the Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake and Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York Central. The Delaware and Hudson and the Seaboard Air Line would constitute independent systems while the Pennsylvania would be forbidden entry into New England.

What would be the carriers' final attitude toward the offered compromise could not be said. Officials of the Baltimore and Ohio and the New York Central found some things worthy of commendation but had not committed themselves definitely.

Took Stand Last Fall.

When the roads in October presented their four-party suggestion, they said if it were not approved without change the plan would fail. What effect business conditions have had since remains to be seen.

The new schedule would break up the proposed Wabash-Seaboard system; abrogate two anti-trust decisions by authorizing the Pennsylvania to absorb the Wabash and the Baltimore and Ohio to take in the Western Maryland.

Likewise, it would leave the Louisville and Nashville and the southern ownership of the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville (the Monon) instead of allocating one-half interest in it to the Baltimore and Ohio.

The commission decision was not unanimous. Commissioners Eastman and McManamy dissented from the entire plan while Brainerd, Lee and Mahaffie would not accept minor features.

Eastman and McManamy held the four-system proposal has "slaughtered the plan for the entire country we set up in 1929 and must be made over again." They objected that the Seaboard Air Line and the Mobile and Ohio, in receiverships, would be left unattached; that the commission had not taken cognizance of Van Sweringen control of the Missouri Pacific.

Opinions Differed.

Lee said the Boston and Maine should be allowed to retain the Delaware and Hudson; that the Baltimore and Ohio should not have in full the Western Maryland and the Detroit and Toledo Shore Line. Mahaffie held the Detroit and Toledo Shore Line should remain with the Nickel Plate.

Brainerd felt admission into Philadelphia should be allowed the Lehigh Valley; the Western Maryland and the Norfolk and Western should be combined and that New England bridge lines should not be disturbed.

The majority of the commission, though, held the consolidation would "serve the public efficiently and economically," preserve "healthful competition" and "maintain, as far as practicable, the existing routes and channels of trade and commerce."

What railroad men found one of the biggest points in the plan, affecting lines as far west as Kansas City, and as far south as Wadesboro, North Carolina, and Bristol, Tennessee, was that involving the Pennsylvania's New England holdings.

The commission ruled that although the Pennsylvania might be willing to accept the plan, it could not until it had sold or placed in the hands of trustees all its holdings and those of its subsidiaries in New England roads.

Pennsylvania's Holdings.

The Pennsylvania and its subsidiary, the Pennroad Corporation, now have 22.79 per cent of New York, New Haven and Hartford stock. The Pennroad has a 19.25 per cent interest in the Boston and Maine, of which the Boston Railroad Holding Company, owned by the New Haven, has another 26.18.

As one reason for blocking Pennsylvania progress into New England, the commission said that of the 57,000 miles included in the consolidation, 31.5 per cent would go to Pennsylvania, 24.5 to the Chesapeake and Ohio-Nickel Plate, 23.7 to the New York Central and 20.3 to the Baltimore and Ohio. The commission added:

"The Pennsylvania system will not only predominate in size but most likely in financial strength, for the properties allocated to it earned in 1929 and 1930 a greater annual return on the investment therein by about 0.5 per cent than was earned on the properties allocated to any of its competing systems."

The decision to let the Delaware and Hudson remain independent and to leave ownership of some New England bridge lines with New England companies was considered at least a partial victory for five governors from that section who sought these concessions.

Bell of New Paltz, a candidate for the ministry under Bishop Manning, had charge of the afternoon service at St. Peter's Church, and the evening service at St. John's Church. Mr. Bell preached a very interesting sermon, the text was taken from I Kings 18:21.

ROXBURY MAN IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH.

Roxbury, July 21.—(Special)—Sunday morning there was an automobile accident near the Hubbel Brothers' place, between Halcottville and Kelley's Corners, in which three cars were involved. One of them was driven by Charles Hull of Roxbury, who was accompanied by Richard Wiedeman. It seems that a car being driven by a girl from Big Indian attempted to pass a car driven by a man from New York without noticing that there were three other cars back of the New York car. The girl's car crashed into the New York car and the one following it from Roxbury. Two cars were completely demolished and the other received a bent fender and smashed lights.

BIRDS MAKE BOARD NESTS WHEN STORMS RAZE TREES

Washington—The noddy tern, bird of the Florida Keys, seems satisfied with any kind of wood for nest-building, reports Dr. Paul Bartsch of the Smithsonian Institution.

He recently visited a "key" where all the vegetation, trees, bushes, and shrubs had been swept off the island by storms. Great numbers of noddy terns used to build their nests there in the vegetation.

Now all the terns lay their eggs on the ground, he found, but retain a desire for some sort of wood near the eggs. They gather a few dead twigs and arrange them in the shape of a nest around the eggs and some terns incubate their eggs on bare boards.

Experts Differ In Condemnation Case

Damages to the farm of John J. House by reason of the taking of lands for the re-construction of the state highway through the village of Esopus was placed at amounts varying from $7,000 down to $2,256, according to witnesses who testified before the condemnation commissioners Thursday. Commissioners Stephan, Wicks and Sutter were informed by witnesses for Mr. House that the difference in the value of the farm of some 120 acres before the taking and after was as high as $7,000, while witnesses for the county placed the depreciation in value at a sum as low as $2,256.

After Mr. House had described the farm and the lands taken by the county for road purposes expert witnesses were sworn to testify as to value before and after the taking. James E. Sneall placed a value of $45,000 on the farm before the taking and $38,800 after the taking. Jacob V. Merrihew the second expert for claimant valued the farm at $45,600 before and $38,000 after the taking.

The county's experts Frank S. Hyatt and Mr. Haviland considered the property worth slightly less. Mr. Hyatt placed a valuation of $37,800 before and $35,444 after the taking, while Mr. Haviland placed a value prior to the taking of $37,900 and $35,450 after the taking.

Robert G. Groves, county attorney, appeared for the county and the Hon. Charles W. Walton for claimant.

Small Things Important

Each task is a challenge in itself, asking the best there is in us for its successful accomplishment. The truly wise man knows that success lies in doing the little things well, letting the other fellow roam around looking for miracles to perform.—Grit.

Valley Farmers Changing Methods

Since hay was first put under cover for winter use, there has been little change in the method of mowing it away. However, like all methods which seem almost changeless, the time some day arrives when a revolutionary idea improves the whole scheme of things. That day has arrived for hay storing and now a system is being used which bears little resemblance to the old order of things.

The method of hay storing as most of us know it, consists of putting the hay, after the sun has cured it, into the mow in its original long state. Usually two or three men are needed up in the mow to store it away.

The new storage idea consists of bringing the cured hay up to the barn and there running it through an ensilage cutter having an adaption in the way of improved feeding rollers. From the cutter, the chopped hay is blown into any selected place at the top of the mow.

Three advantages are immediately apparent from the use of this system. In the first place, no labor is required in the mow, thus reducing the cost of handling the hay. Mow capacity, by actual tests reported in the May 25 issue of Heard's Dairyman, is doubled. That is, two tons of chopped hay are stored in the same place formerly occupied by one ton in long hay. This point is of special interest to the man whose mow capacity is not adequate. And the third advantage is that there is no waste in feeding because the animals must necessarily eat all the chopped hay as selection, as in the case of long hay, is impossible.

This system has already found extensive use in the west and is now being adopted in the Hudson valley by a number of progressive farmers, among them being J. B. Croswell, Stanfordville; Gordon Andrews, Clove Valley; Frederick Ham, Millbrook; John Wilkie, New Windsor; Joseph LaMonte, Salt Point; M. C. Albright, Athens; Herman Plankenhorn, Hyde Park; and N. A. Briggs, Millbrook.

TOURISTS FROM TEXAS CAMPING AT MARLBOROUGH

They left Texas in March after the close of school and will travel until fall. They must return to Texas in October for the opening of school. They have been on the Bennett farm for more than a week and are quartered in tents. They are traveling in cars.

MUNICIPALITIES SEEK CORPORATION LOANS.

Albany, N. Y., July 22 (AP).—New York state is going to ask the Reconstruction Finance Corporation whether any legal obstacles stand in the way of loans to New York municipalities.

At a conference yesterday of legislative leaders and members of the state relief commission with Governor Roosevelt, it was decided to investigate fully the proposal that large cities might borrow relief funds from the federal corporation and indirectly benefit the state.

The state itself, the conference decided, is barred constitutionally from participating directly in the federal relief loans.

Another matter considered at yesterday's conference, that of a special legislative session to enlarge the state relief work, was left undecided. The governor explained that a bond issue for $30,000,000 which the voters are expected to approve at the fall elections should tide state relief work over until next summer.

FARM BOARD LIQUIDATION

There is general relief felt in the way the Farm Board is getting rid of its vast stores of wheat and cotton. Of nearly 330,000,000 bushels of wheat bought to peg the price, there is less than 30,000,000 left. Most of it has been fed back into the market gradually, at a loss averaging around one-half. Much has been given to the Red Cross for distribution to the needy. Some has been traded to Brazil for coffee and some sold to China on long-term credit. Likewise nearly half the 1,300,000 bales of cotton has been given to the Red Cross, and the balance will be marketed at a loss of almost two-thirds, starting next month.

It has been a costly experiment, entered upon in defiance of the judgment of most of the professional economists, and yet believed at the time by millions of Americans to be a justifiable undertaking. Nearly everybody knows better now. It may be a long time before another such effort is made to "stabilize" the prices of great world commodities, whose rise and fall are almost as indifferent to political action as the tides. If the lesson is really learned, it may be worth the quarter-billion dollars it has cost.

SALVAGE FROM WAR DEBTS

Congress maintains stoutly that there must be no new settlement with our war debtors, no modification of the Young plan—which is already modified by a moratorium whose end no one can foretell. It is the privilege of public men to take no chances in an election year. Private citizens are in position to accept facts more frankly and speak more freely.

Congressmen talk as if the only alternative, provided Europe cannot or will not pay as agreed, is cancellation on our part or repudiation on the part of the debtors. Others point out a middle course. An impressive example of this point of view is Walter Lippmann, who says: "The way is still open to a new settlement which will complete the payments in a lump sum. That is almost certainly what our debtors mean to offer us, and I cannot believe we shall be so foolish as to reject it out of hand. There never was an intelligent creditor who refused a cash offer and preferred to cling to his obviously bad bonds. Next winter when this question will confront us, we shall again be facing a large deficit. We shall again be confronted with the necessity of increasing taxes. A billion dollars in hand will look a great deal better than 60 annual payments that are very legal but no good."

A Cleveland bank says a good word for real estate in that district which doubtless applies to real estate in most other communities in varying degree. It speaks with astonishment of the persons who see no future and little value in local real estate. "They seem to forget," says the statement, "that 1,200,000 persons must have homes in which to live, that 636 new households come into being each month by marriages, that more than 1,400 new citizens are born every 30 days and that even in 1931 there were 1,305 new businesses incorporated here." The figures will differ in different cities and towns, but the truth remains that there is an ever-renewed market for land and homes. Particularly after a period like the present, when families combine for a while for economy's sake, there comes a reaction when more elbow room is required. That means more homes with more space around them. It is a little early in the nation's history to record real estate as dead.

A representative of the Farmers National Grain Corporation returns from China with the word that 2,000,000 Chinese workers in the Yangtse Valley have been converted from rice to wheat flour. The 15,000,000 bushels of Farm Board wheat sent to China under long-term financing to relieve flood victims brought about the change. The workers who ate wheat flour found it gave them more endurance and energy than the same amount of rice. They liked it, too. One need not be an economics expert to figure out that if China were at peace and prosperous, it would afford a tremendous market for wheat. It would be a long time before the wheat-growers of the world were troubled much by unmarketable surpluses if China's hordes turned to wheat in a serious way. And what about the rice-growers? Well, that would be another problem.

Coney Island deserves a few words of praise for courage and energy. The day after its $2,000,000-fire the spirit of the place was quite undaunted. Business as usual, or a little better than usual, seemed to be the slogan. There was the magazine vendor whose stock was waterlogged. He stuck up a "Fire Sale" sign and offered his literature for 1 to 3 cents a magazine. He got plenty of buyers, too. The Ferris wheel was busier than ever, with patrons even waiting in line to have a ride, because there was a fine view of the ruins from its highest point. It was the same with other amusement contrivances that took passengers up in the air. One does not usually think of Coney Island as in any way heroic, but apparently the show goes on there as elsewhere in spite of disaster. Losses were forced on many; profits they are going after vigorously and cheerfully.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

YOUR BODY NEEDS LIME.

When you think of the solid bones of the body how they support your entire weight, and give attachment to the muscles, it may never occur to you that although they look so hard and solid nevertheless they contain 99 per cent of the lime in the body and they are giving up lime to the body all the time.

I have often spoken about lime and its great value in helping to build up the cells of the body, how it helps to ward off infection, increases the healing power of the tissues, and helps coagulate the blood.

As far as the mineral needs of the body are concerned, lime stands first; thus your health depends to a great extent upon getting a sufficient amount of lime into the body every day.

It is just here that these hard solid bones are so helpful. Should you be without the foods containing lime for any time, the bones will give up some of their lime, thus preventing the body to waste or become "run down".

In other words, the bones are a store house for lime, and the blood can go there for its supply when the need arises.

Where the individual is without foods containing lime, for a long time, so much lime can be withdrawn from the bones, especially the teeth, that serious results may follow.

Now lime is found in many of the every day foods we eat, but unfortunately there is a fondness with a great many people for foods poor in lime such as cereals, fish, root vegetables and meats. These are good foods, and all of them necessary foods, but other foods are richer in lime and must be eaten.

As you have been taught now for many years, milk is very rich in lime, and you can readily see how important it is that young children and growing children should drink a pint or a quart of milk daily. Hence during the war, all the nations did their best to see that an adequate supply of milk was available for children and mothers.

However you may not like milk, or you'd like a change from it. Can you get lime in other foods besides milk?

Yes, lime is found in cheese, vegetables, especially leafy vegetables, and egg yolk.

Lime is sometimes given in its natural forms—the lactate in ½ teaspoonful doses, and the gluconate in teaspoonful doses, before meals, or 4 hours after meals.

The Faithful Cheat

BY RUBY M. AYRES

SYNOPSIS: The secret of Sondra Kent's sudden marriage to Mark Merriman, before he sailed for the Congo, is threatened by Beatrice Taylor Sondra is knowing with John Anderson, who thinks she has been visiting Beatrice, whereas really she was being married to Mark. Sondra has planned not to tell anyone of her marriage, because she knows that her sister Flora would no longer support her if she knew. And Sondra is not prepared by training to support herself, but must work and live with Flora in the hope that Mark will make a success of the position that Anderson has given him. Anderson loves Sondra, although he has not told her so, since he is married and his wife will not release him. He has held the attitude of a guardian toward Sondra for many years, and has solved her problems and financial difficulties.

Chapter 11

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE

BEATRICE came rushing across to Sondra and John like a small whirlwind.

She was a little creature, fair and fluffy with a passion for frilly clothes.

"Darling—how lovely to see you," she kissed Sondra's cheek. "And Mr. Anderson, too." She had what she called an "incurable passion" for John Anderson.

Anderson rose to his feet, bowing rather formally.

Beatrice irritated him; she reminded him of a tiresome insect which always returned to the attack no matter how often and determinedly one brushed it away.

"Too lovely to see you," she said again to Sondra. "But you're so pale—isn't she, Mr. Anderson? Haven't you been well, and is that why you—"

Sondra interrupted calmly.

"Don't pretend, Bea dear. Mr. Anderson knows all about our little escapade—I told him that you and I had a disgracefully late night out together. I suppose that explains why I look such a rag this morning."

Beatrice looked blank, then suddenly she giggled—it always took her some time to see the point of anything.

"So you told him! Was he very shocked!" She looked archly up at Anderson's immovable face. "My poor little mother will hardly speak to me this morning," she gushed. "What time did we arrive home, Sondra? It must have been quite out all night," Anderson said calmly. "And let me assure you that I am not in the least shocked. My education has been liberal."

Beatrice giggled once more, and made a few vapid remarks before she rushed away again. "Mr. Anderson always makes me feel so small and young," she explained afterwards to Sondra. "A mere child!"

There was a little silence when she had departed.

"I cannot tolerate that girl," Anderson said presently.

Sondra laughed. "Why not, She's quite harmless. I like her."

"She's such a shocking liar," Anderson answered calmly. "I don't object to people telling lies if they're forced to, but I do wish they'd do it in a convincing manner."

Sondra's eyes fell. She felt it was impossible to ask him to explain what he meant.

The air seemed fraught with an intangible "something" which she could not understand; or was it her own state of mind that conjured it? Perhaps she was just imagining that there was an underlying knowledge in everything Anderson said.

Did he guess the truth? And if not what would he say if she suddenly told him "Mark and I were married yesterday."

Anderson spoke suddenly, as if reading her thoughts.

"I must send young Merriman a wire to the boat, to wish him luck. I daresay he feels a bit hipped."

"Oh, I don't think so."

What a hypocrite she was! Sondra felt as if she stood aside and stared at herself in shocked dismay.

"It's a good thing he's a single man," John said casually. "I always dislike wives being left behind when it means a long separation, as it probably does in Merriman's case."

Sondra's lips moved stiffly.

"Why do you dislike—wives being left behind?"

He shrugged his shoulders.

"It's unsettling for a man; it takes his mind off his work, and handicaps him."

"Isn't that rather hard? Why shouldn't men who have to work abroad be married?"

"'Abroad' is rather a vague term. I was speaking of men who have to go where young Merriman has gone. It's not a woman's country as you know."

"And if . . . if Mark had been a married man?" Sondra asked.

He looked at her steadily.

"If Merriman had been a married man, I shouldn't have given him the job," he said.

It was not until late that evening, when Sondra was dressing for dinner, that she remembered the letter which John Anderson had given to her that morning.

She had slipped it into her bag and had forgotten it.

That seemed queer, and very significant of the way in which life had changed during the past 24 hours.

She had even forgotten that her dressmaker was pressing for payment—she had forgotten everything except that with every moment the distance between her and Mark Merriman was increasing by hopeless miles. She took up the little handbag.

The letter was still there, carelessly doubled up as if it was something of no importance.

Sondra tore the flap open without much interest.

What did it matter whether she wore pretty gowns or not? There was no longer anybody in town whom she cared to please.

She flushed a little as she mechanically counted the crisp banknotes.

One thousand dollars! she let the money slip from her fingers to the dressing-table.

Nobody would ever believe her if she told them that in return for such a gift she had given nothing—would never give anything; people would laugh if they knew that moreover Anderson had never asked anything of her—probably never would ask.

It seemed an unusual sort of friendship—affection.

It was so seldom that even a very rich man gave generously without hope of return.

Mark would be horrified; Mark would never understand. She could imagine his indignation.

Some day he would come back! and what then?

For the first time Sondra looked honestly into the future and tried to realize what life would be then—if ever—Mark came home.

She knew that if he made money all would probably be well, but if not?—if he came back as he went away—poor, without prospects—what would become of them?

She knew that she could not.

There was always John; John would do anything for her—and he would see to Mark's future. Influence meant so much nowadays; the thought comforted her.

Of course Mark would get on—he would make a position in the world, and they would find happiness together.

And in the meantime—

It was not yet 24 hours since they had said goodbye, and already it seemed as if it was years ago that she had stood on the pier trying to hide from the world that Mark meant anything more to her than just an ordinary friend who was going abroad.

Not yet 24 hours! and it might be five years before they met again.

Was it possible to still love a man passionately whom one had not seen for five years? People changed so. Mark might grow stout or bald . . . she smiled involuntarily at the thought.

Five years! Five summers, five winters—five glorious springs, and all without Mark. She was his wife, though they had lived together for only a few short hours; she would still be his wife in five years' time—even if he came back stout and bald.

But Mark would come back as he had gone away—keen, upright, alert. . . .

Sudden tears dimmed her eyes as she recalled his face; how horrible of her to have such thoughts of him.

Flora came into the room unceremoniously.

"Not ready yet of course" . . . she said disagreeably. "The car's waiting—do hurry up. Here's a wire for you—it came hours ago, but I forgot about it." She flung the yellow envelope down on the dressing-table beside Anderson's banknotes, her eyes narrowing as she saw them, but she made no comment.

"Will John Anderson be over tonight?" she asked.

"I believe so."

You believe so? Don't you know? But I suppose it's stupid to ask. He's always to be found where you are. Why in God's name doesn't he get rid of his wife?" she demanded.

"You'd better ask him," Sondra said.

"Would you marry him—if he was free?" Flora asked.

"No."

"Why not?" Flora asked.

Sondra receives an unpleasant shock tomorrow when her sister says "It's a good thing you didn't happen to care for Mark."

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—

by John Hix

The Sacred Scarab, a beetle held holy by the Egyptians, was so revered by the ancients that they often buried the insect with their dead. The scarab was embalmed and placed in the coffin to drive away evil spirits. The scarab was worshipped by the Egyptians. Its figure is often found in their paintings, and on their tombs and monuments.

Historians believe that the scarab was adopted in Egypt as a religious symbol because of its habit of rolling refuse; on which it feeds, into balls; and the fact that it appeared in great numbers on the banks of the Nile after the annual rising and falling of the water.

The ball they rolled, Egyptians held, represented the movements of the sun and moon. The angular projections from the scarab's heads represented rays of the sun.

"Putt" Mossman's 16 consecutive ringers—eight frames each with a double ringer—did not count one point toward winning the championship because his opponent, Bert Duryee, of Wichita, Kans., performed exactly the same feat. As fast as Mossman laid the horseshoes over the peg, Duryee followed suit, and for eight innings neither missed a shot.

Contrary to popular belief, horseshoe pitching is not a modern sport. It originated when Rome and Greece were world powers. Soldiers invented the game as a camp sport.

HIGHLAND.

Highland, July 21—The Auxiliary Club, of which Mrs. Suzanne E. Decker is president, has accomplished great good along certain lines and on July 7, the "Birthday Supper" was a success and delighted everyone. It was a feast in itself, a table for every month in the year, and presided over by twelve hostesses and assistants. Decorations were in keeping with each month. There were three judges appointed by the president, namely, Mrs. A. W. Lent, Mrs. F. Wilker, Mrs. F. Randall, who were at their wits end for decisions. Words are inadequate to describe its excellence and it was very gratifying to the president and to the efficient chairmen of various departments to hear on all sides such enthusiastic expressions of praise. The club motto, "Progress," limited only by attainment, is admirably well adapted to the spirit of the workers, and to take care of nearly 200 as nicely as the club members did was not an easy matter. The chairman of the kitchen, Miss Bertha Dimsey, had a most efficient corps of workers and this cannot be too gratefully acknowledged, and the enthusiasm and ability of all certainly inspired splendid results. The monthly meetings of the club are not purely for business and all fully recognize that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," so a portion of time is always devoted to the social side. The routine business of the club is always conducted without friction and the true club spirit reigns supreme. At the next meeting, August 5, plans will be formulated for some season's work. It is certainly pleasing to all to realize such a nice sum for the treasury. Many thanks are extended to everyone who in any way contributed to the success of the affair, and to the judges, the president expresses her sincere gratitude.

CASH BONUS INTERESTS TURKISH WOMEN IN FARMS

Angora, Turkey (AP) — Although Turkish peasant women have tilled the soil and done the work of a man for centuries, Melahat Hanim is the first Turkish city woman to be interested in agriculture.

She is the only woman enrolled in the Agricultural School of Angora, which has recently been re-opened. The teachers have been called from Germany and German methods are taught.

In summer the students are given practical training on the Gazi's model farm, where they are provided with bed and food plus $25. Thus it pays to be interested in agriculture in the Turkey of Kemal, and already a number of young girls are applying for enrollment next year.

Radio Operator at 9

Porterville, Cal. (AP) — Operator W6FZA, his friends believe, is the youngest licensed amateur radio operator. His name is Alan Taylor Margo, and he is only 9 years 5 months old. Alan built his own short wave set and can take 15 words a minute in code.

News All Over The Empire State

(By The Associated Press)

Rochester (AP)—It looked like a "petting party", but it was just a trap with Deputy Sheriff Jerry Schurz and his attractive wife as the bait. The deception was disastrous for four youths alleged to have been doing well for themselves in collecting "Parking Privileges" from couples in secluded spots. The quartet were fined and sent to jail.

Keene Valley (AP)—A warning against leaving automobiles unguarded in lonely places was broadcast after a mountain climber returned to his car near here to find its six wheels missing. The two spare wheels had been removed by sawing away the carriers, the thieves working deliberately.

Schenectady (AP)— George D. Lamberton, who twice ran for mayor of Schenectady, now wants to go to Congress. He has entered the Democratic primaries to seek nomination from the 30th district as the opponent of the Republican Candidate who is expected to be Representative Frank Crowther.

Gore Mountain (AP)—The Hooper Garnet Mines in the north river section are being operated after a shutdown of several months. Operators hope to run the mines part of each week throughout the rest of the summer.

Man wants but little here below,
The poets still profess.
And, taking things as they are now,
He's getting less and less.

The dashing young daughter of a well-known woman appeared at her home recently wearing an outlandish hat.

Practical-Minded Mother—Where did you get that hat?

Daughter—I bought it.

Mother sneering—No you didn't. They sold it to you.

Do you remember 'way back when mother put a chair alongside the bed to keep you from falling out?

Mrs. Mack—I'm bothered with a little wart I'd like to have removed.

Dr. Williams—The divorce lawyer is at the second door to your left.

Our idea of a disappointed wife is one who took her man for better or for worse and found that he wasn't even good.

Friend—Where are you going?

Mr. F.—To Catskill with my wife—we are going by air.

Friend—But there is no air line to Catskill.

Mr. F.—There will be by the time my wife is ready.

Mountain Guide—Be careful not to fall here. It is dangerous. But if you do fall, remember to look to the left, as you get a most wonderful view.

Little Theodore was always an inquisitive child. One day Theodore and his mother went to a wedding. As the bride and groom walked stately down the aisle, little Theodore chirped:

Theodore—Oh, mamma, why does the bride wear a white gown at weddings?

His Mother—Because white stands for purity, darling.

Theodore (after being silent for a moment)—Oh, mamma, then why must the groom always wear black?

No matter how many clothes your wife has she always buys a lot more the minute you offer to take her on a trip.

Dumb Dora—Isn't Bill just wonderful? He's already been promoted to field marshal.

Horsefeathers—What! From private to field marshal in two months?

Dumb Dora—Did I say field marshal? Well, perhaps it's court marshal—I know it's one or the other.

Two friends dining at a downtown club were discussing the romance of a common acquaintance.

The First—Dorothea is very devoted to him, isn't she?

The Other—She's head over heels in love with him. She quit drinking, she quit smoking, and she's quit swearing all for his sake.

Here lies the body of William Brace:
He sure was one fine fella.
He said in his sleep: "I love you Grace."
But his wife's name was Stella.

An important position is the result of starting in a small way, doing the little details carefully and well, and then being prepared to accept the greater responsibilities.

Doctor—Ever have any trouble with dyspepsia?

Patient—Only when I try to spell it.

An absent-minded man was unloading his brief case after dinner, preparatory to an evening work.

His Wife (interrupting)—Have you seen this? There's a report in the paper of your death.

Absent-Minded Man—Is that so? We must remember to send a wreath.

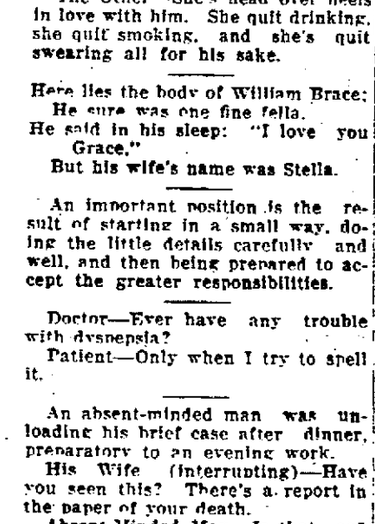
PEARY, ADVENTURE CRAFT, PROSAIC SURVEY BOAT NOW

Sandusky, Ohio (AP)—The Peary, a "soldier of fortune" among ships and partner in glamorous adventures of men, has been reduced to the dull tasks of a survey craft on Lake Erie.

Built in 1918 as a mine sweeper for the French government, the Peary's war record was interrupted before it started by the armistice. In 1921 she was taken by a party of big game hunters on an African trip.

She was taken to Greenland in 1924 by Admiral Richard Byrd who made a flight over the North Pole on the expedition. Two years later she was taken by W. H. Bramley of Cleveland to the south seas on a voyage in quest of a "dream island".



Bowling along on the boulevard—look!—

And he can't take a bus 'cause he hasn't a dime!

SERAPHS, ROYALTY SOLD AS BARGAINS IN LONDON

London (AP)—Kings in good condition, nine guineas each; one queen eight guineas, because she is rather crumbled; angels at five guineas, fairly well preserved.

These are some of the bargains being offered in stonework taken from the houses of parliament in the process of re-facing.

Members of parliament are taking pieces of the stone home for garden ornaments. Dominion visitors are often buyers but few Americans seem interested.

FIT A NEW KITCHEN INTO YOUR PRESENT HOME

Whatever the type of architecture in your home, there is no reason why the kitchen should not be thoroughly modern, and every reason why it should be so for your convenience and enjoyment. Our HOME MODERNIZING BUREAU will help you to get these advantages from a modernized kitchen.

WELL-PLANNED WORK SPACE. Scientifically accurate studies have shown that the average housewife walks many unnecessary miles in doing her housework. Replanning the kitchen will mean more work done with less effort.

MODERN EQUIPMENT. Many of the more monotonous or trying routine tasks in the kitchen are reduced to a minimum, or done automatically with gas or electricity. Now you may have all the modern appliances at one time under the new Complete Modern Kitchen Plan.

A SECOND LIVING ROOM. In these days of informal entertainment, your guests are as likely to gather in the kitchen as in any other room. Your hospitality can be unrestrained and your pride in your home complete in a well-equipped and modern appearing kitchen.

ENJOYABLE WORKING HOURS. Many hours of every day must be spent in the kitchen. It is at once the office and workroom of the home. It can be as dainty and attractive a place in which to live and work as any other part of the house. And how different home duties seem when working surroundings are attractive!

If you have thought of modernizing your kitchen, entirely or in part, the Modernizing Bureau will help you to assemble the information you need, and to work out your own ideas in practical plans. There is no obligation involved in calling on their aid.

Frank Harrington Spoke To Kiwanians

Kiwanian Frank Harrington of Delhi, past president of that club, was the guest speaker on Thursday noon before the Kingston Kiwanis club, his subject being the international convention of the organization, held in Detroit, Mich., the last week in June. Mr. Harrington was an excellent speaker, and his address supplemented the reports of the two local delegates who attended the convention.

Paul Zucca read a letter concerning the National Radio Audition for 1932, sponsored by the Atwater Kent Foundation. The local contest will be held in St. John's Church on August 19, starting at 5:30 o'clock, and is open to young men and women between the ages of 18 and 25. Winners in the contest will be judged on the best voices, quality of voice being the first necessity, and not training. The winners of the national contest, one man and one woman, will receive $5,000 each; second place winners will receive $1,000 each and six runners-up will receive $500 each.

Secretary Schoonmaker read letters from the Boy Scout organization and the Y. M. C. A. in which both expressed appreciation for sending five boys each to the scout camp and the Y. M. C. A. camp. An invitation was extended by both camps to the Kiwanians to visit them.

The following guests were introduced: Robert G. Groves and F. A. Freer, both of Kingston.

Mr. Harrington discussed the humorous side of the convention and the trip there. He was presented to the club by Howard St. John, who explained that he had not told the speaker that the club had already heard about the convention. Mr. Harrington arose to the occasion and held the interest of his audience until the end. He did not overlap the reports of the delegates. President Brandorff thanked the speaker, after which the meeting adjourned with a closing song, led by Paul Zucca, accompanied at the piano by Danny Bittner.

Weakest Link In Railway Is Russia's Guard

By STANLEY P. RICHARDSON.

Moscow (AP)—The Trans-Siberian Railroad, the only line which links up the whole Soviet Union from the Baltic to the Pacific, is at once the weakest and strongest factor in the nation's transportation system, from a military standpoint.

This paradoxical fact is being considered here in the light of recent Japanese actions in Manchuria. There is evidence that such moves as the Japanese seizure on June 29 of Chinese customs at Manchuli, on Manchuria's western border, and the more recent taking over of Russian oil and warehouses at Harbin, are straining Soviet patience.

Lesson in Czar's Defeat.

The railroad is weakest because if war comes in the Far East it would be difficult to move sufficient troops and supplies over it unless there was time for advance preparations. Historians lay part of the responsibility for czarist Russia's defeat by Japan to the railroad's inability to rush large bodies of troops to Manchuria.

Profiting by that lesson, the Soviet authorities began reinforcing their already strong military base in the Far East as soon as the war scare was occasioned here by Japanese occupation of Manchuria. Now Red Army leaders assert that the Soviet Union is ready to repel an invasion—a possibility about which the press here warns unceasingly.

The military strength of the link lies, paradoxically, in the place which might be considered its greatest weakness—the fact that the far eastern end of the line, stretching 1,500 miles from Chita to Vladivostok, is only single track.

It has been left that way deliberately as a piece of military strategy.

Would Hamper Foe.

This makes of the territory lying between Chita and Vladivostok a sort of bottleneck. Therein lies the strategy. An official of the commissariat for transportation explained it this way:

"Suppose an enemy invaded Soviet territory from the east. He naturally would make first for the Trans-Siberian, which is the only means by which he could hope to advance. But a single track line could not accommodate the troops and supplies he would have to move.

"Consider therefore, that if the single track is somewhat inconvenient to us how much more disadvantageous it would be as an instrument for an invading force in a hostile country.

"Japan tried to take Siberia once when the Allies intervened there right after the Bolsherik revolution. But her troops nearly froze to death because there was no adequate transportation. Before the Japanese plan on getting that far again they had better recall that experience.

"No, I think we'll let that single track stay for awhile."

Soviets Try to Melt Hail

Leningrad (AP)—Soviet meteorologists are experimenting with rockets in an attempt to melt hail into rain or snow before the icy pellets can damage crops. Missiles two feet long are shot up 3,500 feet to blast apart the air currents that cause moisture to congeal.

Reds Busy in Argentina

Buenos Aires (AP)—The newspaper La Prensa says it has found 621 publications in Argentina, printed in every language from Spanish to Arabic and Esperanto, inciting the masses to violence and picturing the coming of communism.

Libby Holman, Broadway "blues singer" whose career was marred by tragedy when her husband, Smith Reynolds, met death from a bullet, displayed her stage talent early in life. The annual at Hughes High School, Cincinnati, took note of it and predicted she some day would be a stage star. Here she is in typical poses.

First in knock rating . . . Proved by 3-day road test of 17 gasolines . . . Same car. Same load. Same hill . . . and the New Anti-knock TYDOL won every triple-checked trial.

First in power . . . Because the less a gasoline knocks, the more power it develops. When the knocks leave, extra power comes into your motor. That's why New TYDOL gives you ceaseless, silent, super-power at no extra cost.

First in mileage . . . Because more power gives you more miles. And because New TYDOL gives you all the other premium qualities that help to put extra miles in every gallon.

Fill up today. Pick out your hill. Make your own road test for both anti-knock and power. You don't need a month—or a week . . . to convince you. One trip will do it. Or one tankful. Stop at the orange-and-black TYDOL pump and make your test run today.

ALL COOKS LOOK ALIKE

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press.)

Brooklyn, Conn.—A lot of people—at least 200—think the late Theodore Roosevelt is running for president. The one-time president's widow says she has received more than 300 congratulatory telegrams from folk who confuse "T. R." with Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee.

Binghamton, N. Y.—The reason given by Robert Nutt of Greensboro, N. C. for his failure to keep an engagement before the Johnson City Rotary Club yesterday was that he forgot about it. Mr. Nutt is known as a "memory expert."

Philadelphia—Magistrate Belcher solved the dilemma of the two hens and one rooster which, neighbors complained, annoyed them. He told Marcel Donofray, owner of the fowl, to put them in the pot for Sunday's dinner. Donofray said "O. K." and invited the complaining neighbors and the magistrate to join him at the meal.

Buffalo—Glenn Starr Ross, who sought unsuccessfully to be governor of Ohio on the Democratic ticket last year, summarized in a speech here the wants of the American people as: "A job, a glass of beer—and lots of letting alone."

London—When the king and queen give a party they really give a party. There were 7,000 guests at the garden party at the palace yesterday. The guests dined from a long buffet. Their majesties were satisfied with tea.

San Diego—They had to tow the tuna clipper California in because a shark, entangled in nets set for sardines, broke the rudder. Some said the shark was 50 feet long. Some said 30. Maybe it wasn't a shark at all. It followed the tradition of all big fish and got away.

San Francisco—Kid McCoy, out of prison parole, is sure of one thing: He's through with the ring—boxing and matrimonial. He is en route to Dearborn, Mich., to go to work.

LIVE BUSINESS MEN ADVERTISE IN THE FREEMAN

Fashions by Eleanor Gunn

The Light-Above Scheme Goes Into Reverse

New York—With the agility that the Paris couturiers always show for juggling things about to get an entirely different effect while at the same time using the same old media, they have reversed the light-above idea to a light-below and dark-above treatment. From the Riviera, which has blossomed out as a summer resort, comes the report that chic women at Juan-les-Pins are wearing white flannel skirts with navy polo shirts, or white linen skirts with colored linen tops. Brown, for instance, being a favorite choice. It is distinctly smart to turn yourself upside down in this manner.

Another Riviera enthusiasm is that for monograms. They adorn scarfs and all manner of things, but then, scarfs are so numerous that there is hardly a thing that does not come in useful as a decoration for them. The anchor pattern is one of the most approved, especially by those who like clothes with a deep-sea flavor, and there are many such—women who cling, for instance, to the gob's hat or, for that matter, to the beret, which, one may be in danger of forgetting, is of Basque-fisherman origin.

When you're counting your buttons, be sure some of them are pearl, which does not necessarily mean white pearl. Red ones are chic on white flannel. Smart folk seem still to rally around the flag.

Not having tired of contrasts, those who have joined in the procession of feather boas are choosing boas that offer a color contrast to the gown. One woman recently seen at a smart gathering wore a black gown with a jade green boa that was sustained by jade jewelry.

Paris Hints at Colored Gloves

Paris—One pair of green velvet gloves attracted much attention at the races at Chantilly. They were long, eight-button length, slightly flaring, and the inner fingers and palms were made of suede fabric in lighter green. They were credited to Nicollet and were worn with a velvet toque in the same two shades of green, with a white dress. This entrance of velvet into the glove field is commented upon by stylists here as a possibility for next winter.

With her first large autumn hat collection, Madame Agnes shows elbow-length gloves of ruby-colored crepe Agnes, a heavy pebbly crepe, to accompany toques of the same material.

In the meantime, mesh gloves, mostly of cotton, are being worn to some extent. Half a dozen pairs were counted at Chantilly, in color matching the costume.

ANTICIPATING FALL

Copyright, 1932, by Fairchild

A navy dress in light wool velour, distinguished by a sleeve that introduces fulness in new fashion, worked with the design of the shoulder, that creates a narrow shoulder line. Round flat buttons of nickel and a black oilcloth belt are details. The hat is navy felt with nickel ball trimming.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Double-faced silks are offered simply as luxurious versions of classic fabrics for evening wear which will tempt the designer to the development of fresh detail.

The outstanding jewelry note at Ascot was the predominance of pearls. Nearly every woman in the enclosure was wearing a single, double or treble-string necklet, the first type leading numerically.

Cumulative

Familiarity breeds contempt. After you get used to a bit of scandal, you must add a little to make it sound thrilling.—Schenectady Gazette.

His customers include people in all walks of life, farmers, undertakers, truckmen, milk men, town highway superintendents, county highway officials, etc. Mr. Sahler hopes to sell another car load in the vicinity of the Esopus valley and distribute the oil from either Cold Brook or Ashokan station.

Examination disclosed an old break in the axle shaft and the owner feels that he is extremely fortunate that the final break occurred at so favorable a time.

The fair and dry weather continues. It's certainly great for haying and harvest but growing crops are greatly in need of rain. Lucky indeed it is that there were heavy rains earlier as the sources of water supply are at full head and should maintain a sufficient flow for some time yet. It is the exception rather than the rule that the reservoir west basin should be full in midsummer as it is now.

Among callers Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Watson Bishop at West Shokan Heights were Mrs. Ida Snyder of Brooklyn, a lifelong friend, Mrs. Arthur Snyder and daughters, Betty and Jane of the Traver Hollow Inn also Mrs. Louise Winchell and two grandchildren of Main street.

Poet by Inspiration.

Caedmon was the first Anglo-Saxon poet. He died in 680. He is believed to have been a swineherd to the monks of Whitby. He had given no evidence of poetical talent until he had a vision in which he was commanded to sing. He immediately composed a poem in praise of the Creator and later wrote other devotional verses.

Port Ewen Firemen To Lead Soldiers

Saturday is the day that the Kingston units of the 156th Field Artillery leave for their annual training tour at Pine Camp, Jefferson county, where the National Guardsmen will spend two weeks studying warfare as conducted by their branch of the service. After inspection the guardsmen will be released with orders to return at 7:30 o'clock to entrain for their journey upstate. The trip will be made in Pullmans affording sleeping comforts to the men.

Marching from the armory to the West Shore station, the Artillerymen will be led by the Port Ewen Firemen's Fife and Drum Corps. The little parade is expected to be witnessed by a large turnout of the soldiers' friends and those of the bandsmen.

A general invitation to the public to attend the inspection and parade is extended by Major Hillebrant.

Some 30 horses owned by the Field Artillery left Kingston about two weeks ago for Pine Camp under the supervision of Sergeant Francis Joyce. They will remain at the reservation for the rest of the summer.

STEEL NOW BRIDGES FAMOUS EUPHRATES

Historic River Spanned by Modern Structure.

Washington.—The first steel highway bridge across the Euphrates river in upper Iraq is nearing completion some 40 miles west of Bagdad, according to news dispatches. The structure, which is one of the most important current engineering projects of the Near East, will be a link in the busy overland motor transport route that has grown up since the World war between Bagdad and Damascus.

"Roads have been beaten out in the sands along the Euphrates by men and camels, horses and chariots for 50 centuries," says a National Geographic society bulletin. "Rigid bridges have played a minor part in this continuous traffic. Floating bridges have been strung across at half a dozen points; and at other places ferries are operated.

"Only the Nile has so venerable a record as the Euphrates and its companion river, the Tigris," continues the bulletin; "and even the Nile is less rich in historic incident. The Euphrates has been the boundary line of successive empires; along it have surged battles and invasions that have changed world history; besides it have grown some of the greatest cities that ever existed. To its valley can be traced the beginnings of many practices, arts and sciences that civilization cherishes today—sciences and practices as varied as astronomy and the drawing of bank drafts, geometry, calendar calculations, and mortgaging of real estate.

Two Streams Unite.

"The Euphrates rises in the Armenian Taurus mountains, little more than a hundred miles southeast of the Black sea. It flows for nearly 600 miles through Turkish territory and more than 200 miles through French controlled Syria before entering Iraq.

"In the vicinity of Bagdad (which is on the Tigris) the Euphrates approaches to within 20 miles of its great companion river. The two streams then gradually diverge, to unite 200 miles farther down. The oval territory inclosed by these watery arms is the famed Sumerian plain, where, so far as written records disclose, the earth's first cities came into being.

"Where the Euphrates and Tigris approach above Bagdad, the former is 16 feet higher than the latter. Irrigation canals taken from the Euphrates can therefore be led across the plain and the drainage allowed to enter the Tigris. The Sumerians and their successors discovered this ideal situation scores of centuries ago and constructed numerous canals, developing the region into a fertile garden. Farther down stream the Euphrates drops to a lower level, and the canal procedure was reversed. Everywhere the country was gridironed with canals.

"As succeeding generations developed skill in hydraulic engineering, huge works were constructed. One canal paralleling the Euphrates from Hit to the Persian gulf was 480 miles long. It was probably the longest canal ever constructed. An ancient canal connecting the Euphrates and Tigris near Bagdad was navigable by steamers 60 years ago, but has since silted.

"The highly developed canal system made Mesopotamia ('the land between the rivers') prosperous for milleniums under various governments. Even after the Moslems took possession much of the vast system was preserved. But the Mongol invasion in 1256 brought ruin. Head works and embankments were destroyed, and the plains were turned into alternate stretches of desert and swamp. It is in this condition that much of the land along the lower Euphrates is to be found today. Certain areas are well watered and well drained.

Passes Babylon's Ruins.

"Fifty miles after passing close to Bagdad, the Euphrates river runs beside the ruins of Babylon. Mounds of bricks and broken walls exposed by the work of archeologists cover more than 50 square miles, and mark the place where one of the greatest of the world's ancient cities throbbed with life 2,500 years and more ago. At the height of its power and wealth Babylon numbered its inhabitants by the millions. On the southern portion of the site of Babylon is the modern town of Hilla, with busy bazaars among date groves and gardens.

"After the Euphrates and Tigris unite, the combined stream is known as the Shatt-al-Arab, which flows into the Persian gulf. Sixty miles up the Shatt-al-Arab is Basra, the chief port of Iraq. The river harbor has a depth of 17 feet at low tide. From Basra a railway extends to Bagdad and on to Mosul. There are no rails between Mosul and Nisibin, on the Turk-Syrian border, but a motor service closes the gap; and it is now possible to buy a through ticket from Paris to Bagdad or Basra. When Bagdad was at its zenith under the caliphs, Basra was the busiest port of the East and had several hundred thousand inhabitants. The present population is about 85,000.

"The Euphrates and the Tigris have built the fertile Sumerian plain with their silt. The delta advances into the Persian gulf about 60 feet a year. In the past 3,000 years all the land between the present meeting place of the rivers and the sea has been contributed. At the end of the most recent ice age the Euphrates, according to geological estimates, entered the sea west of the site of Bagdad, more than 400 miles from the Persian gulf."

Philippines' Own Film Queen

Marcia Matthews, dark-haired Manila beauty, is to be starred in the first talking picture to be produced in the Philippines. Manila-made pictures featuring Filipino beauties heretofore have been silent.

At The Theatres

Today

Kingston: "The Man Who Played God". Meritorious entertainment, with George Arliss, the premier actor of them all, in a story both unusual and entertaining. The plot concerns a deaf man, who discovers the wants and troubles of others, and who silently spends his time making life better for unfortunate human beings. It's the kind of a play that everyone should see. The dramatic efforts of Mr. Arliss are superb, and a fine supporting cast lends added ability to a thoroughly worthwhile talking picture. With the theatres cluttered with stories of sex, jazz, and gangdom, this picture should prove a welcome and much needed relief. Grand entertainment, with a grand star portraying one of his finest motion picture characterizations.

Orpheum: "Sky Bride." The story of a flying troupe of stunt flyers, that comes to a fatal end when one of the troupe cracks up and dies in his efforts to thrill the crowd. His pal, who is to blame for the death of the flyer, cannot bring himself to fly again until something happens that forces him into the sky. Swell entertainment of you like aviation thrills, with a cast that offers Richard Arlen and Jack Oakie.

Broadway: "Winner Takes All." James (knock them down and drag them out) Cagney puts across another winner in this fast moving, exciting tale of the prize ring. This show is an authentic story of a fighter with more brawn than brains, who wins his battles with punches rather than science. A blonde siren lures him away from his sweetheart, and the fighter has his face remodeled and gives up training. What happens in his championship fight, when he learns the blonde adventuress is playing him for a fool, has enough wallop to please anyone. Cagney is at his best in this enjoyable, rough story of the pugilistic racket, and the play is swell entertainment for those who like their talkies a bit hard boiled. A fine supporting cast includes Marion Nixon, Virginia Bruce and Guy Kibbee. Four star entertainment.

Tomorrow

Kingston: "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." This well remembered story of the stage and screen proves to be a personal triumph for Marion Nixon in the title role that Janet Gaynor refused to take. Miss Nixon gives the most beautiful and moving performance of her career in this romantic and restful talking picture. A picture recommended for both old and young, for this closely adapted story from the silent version of a few years back, has taken on added effectiveness with the addition of voice. Ralph Bellamy, Louise Closser Hale, and Mae Marsh are also in the cast.

Orpheum: Same.

Broadway: "The Texas Bad Man." Thrills and rapid action are assured any audience who follows the motion picture exploits of Tom Mix. This play proves no exception. The popular western star has a way of making his pictures successful hits, and this show will please not only the boys but dad also. It's the story of an officer of the law who pretends he is an outlaw so that he can trap a gang of desperados. There is action every minute, and romance thrown in for good measure. And of course there is Tony, the wonder horse.

First U. S. Postmaster

The Post Office department says that July 26, 1775, the Continental congress established the post office with Benjamin Franklin as the first postmaster general. On September 26, 1789, Samuel Osgood was the first postmaster appointed under the Constitution.

Best Things Are Nearest

The best things are nearest: breath in your nostrils, light in your eyes, flowers at your feet, duties at your hand, the path of God just before you. Then do not grasp at the stars, but do life's plain, common work as it comes, certain that daily duties and daily bread are the sweetest things of life. —R. L. Stevenson.

Virginia-Born Nancy Astor Helps Wales Meet British Law-Makers

London (AP).—When the Prince of Wales wanted to meet the lesser known members of the British parliament he went to an American born woman for help.

Lady Astor, M. P. for Plymouth and native of Virginia, was acquainted with the royal desire, and forthwith gave a party to which were asked those M. P.'s who also serve although they only stand and wait.

The prince, of course, was asked, too, to the town house of the Astors in St. James's Square; he came and circulated freely among M. P. guests, who were drawn from all parties.

The constant efforts which the Prince of Wales makes to keep in touch with the governing elements of the country over which he some day will sit as king-emperor recall to many a prophecy in George Bernard Shaw's "Apple Cart."

Some day, Shaw said, a prince of Wales is going to kick over the traces, stand for parliament, become prime minister, and eventually rule the country in fact as well as in myth.

"Little Stories for Bedtime" by Thornton W. Burgess

LONGLEGS' BREAKFAST IS SNATCHED AWAY

Don't count your chickens till they're hatched,
Nor eat your dinner till you get it.
Don't try to fly till you get wings,
Nor wash your face until you wet it.

LONGLEGS the heron stood among the rushes on the edge of the Smiling Pool and his eyes were bright with joy. Just a little way out in front of him a school of minnows were at play and little by little they were drawing nearer and nearer. Longlegs knows all about minnows. He knows just how heedless and careless they are when at play, and he knows that they dearly love to play among the bulrushes. You see, when Longlegs isn't about they are safer there than anywhere else, and they know it. Out in the deep water live big fish who are quite as fond of minnows as is Longlegs himself, but where the bulrushes grow the water is very shallow. It is not deep enough for the big fish, but plenty deep enough for little minnows. Then, too, there is always plenty to eat there.

Then He Closed His Wings and Shot Down.

So Longlegs felt sure that these minnows he was watching would soon come swimming around his very feet, for he know that they did not know that he was there. He had waited so long that his stomach was so empty that he felt as if the bottom was dropping out of it. Not so much as a single pollywog had shown itself. This was because Grandfather Frog had seen Longlegs when he arrived and had warned the pollywogs to keep away from where he was. You know the pollywogs are Grandfather Frog's children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. So when at last Longlegs saw those minnows he was happy. He felt absolutely sure of at least one of them, and he meant to pick out the biggest and fattest.

Now it is one of the laws of the Great World that no one can be sure of a thing until he has it. People think they are sure of things. Buster Bear thought he was sure of all the honey in Busy Bee's storehouse, but you remember what happened. He had eaten but half of it when Farmer Brown's Boy gave him such a fright that he ran away, leaving the other half. More than once Reddy Fox has thought he was sure of catching Peter Rabbit, only to have Peter get away most unexpectedly. Then there was the time when Little Mr. Striped Snake caught one of the children of Stickytoes the Tree toad and had already begun to swallow him. He had every reason to think that he was sure of little Stickytoes, but along came Farmer Brown's Boy and made him cough up little Stickytoes. So you see it is of no use to even think you are sure of anything until you have it where it cannot get away or be taken away from you. The only time you can be sure of a dinner is when it is in your stomach.

Longlegs knew this. Anyway he ought to have known it. But the fact, the plain fact, remains that he thought he was sure of one of those minnows. He could almost feel the comfortable sensation of one of them wriggling down his long throat to his empty stomach. Nearer the careless minnows came, and nearer. The head of Longlegs was drawn back ready to be shot forward with the speed of lightning. The biggest, fattest minnow was lazily swimming straight toward him and was almost within reach.

Right then something happened. Out from the Big Hickory Tree on the bank of the Smiling Pool flew another fisherman. He was not very big. He wore a pointed cap which made his head look too big for his body, and he was modestly but handsomely dressed in blue and gray and white. Straight out, right over the school of minnows he flew, and for just a second seemed to stand still in the air. Then he closed his wings and shot down. There was a silvery splash and then up he came with the biggest, fattest minnow in his stout bill. With a harsh rattling cry of triumph he flew back to the Big Hickory Tree, where he thumped the minnow on a branch and then began to gulp it down head first. It was Rattles the Kingfisher.

Of course all the other minnows darted away in great fright, while poor Longlegs could only stare across at that breakfast he had thought he was so sure of, and which was now going down the throat of Rattles the Kingfisher.

Novel Features At Y. M. C. A. Camp

Camp Promaker — Under the guidance of a camp council composed of alert, imaginative boys, novel program features continue to be popular at the Y. M. C. A. camp. Encouraged by the recent success of the star hike and the backwards day, the council decided to try a series of adventure hikes. Thursday afternoon after swim, each cabin group set out by itself, some in boats and others on foot. Each group cooked its supper in the woods, remained there until dusk, and hiked through the woods after dark. At Friday evening's campfire, each group must relate its adventures to the camp.

Recent athletic activities at the camp include the softball and horseshoe leagues. The softball leagues for the first two weeks were won by the teams captained by Coach Klas and John Salvatore. The former team consisted of Coach Klas, Cliff Van Valkenburgh, Phillips, Byrne, Canfield, Rowland, Taylor, Kevan, France, H. Gumaer, and Greenwald. Salvatore's team contained, besides himself, Coutant, Altamarie, Mellert, Saas, E. Greene and A. Gumaer. The award to each winning team was a watermelon. The success of this sport, as well as the spirit of unity prevailing in camp, is shown by the fact that every leader and camper played on one of the softball teams.

The doubles finals of the horseshoe tournament were played by Sammons and DeWitt against Rowland and Schmalkuche. In a thrilling three-game match, Sammons and DeWitt came back after losing the second game to win the third and the championship. A prize will be awarded to the winners.

On Tuesday evening the camp entertained the Kingston Triangle Club. Fred Van Deusen, president of the club, gave an inspiring talk to the boys at the evening campfire, telling of the struggles and sacrifices involved in the development of the camp site by members of the club.

Much interest is being shown in camp minstrel show, to be held in the camp lodge on Tuesday evening, July 26. The boys voted unanimously to produce a show and are working hard under the leadership of Francis Phillips and Paul Haas. It is hoped that much latent talent will be unearthed, but in any event there will be much fun for all.

Water Board Case Decision Reserved

The hearing on the petition of Charles E. Ford, secretary of the board of commissioners of the Phoenicia water district, and others, for the removal of the two other commissioners, J. J. McGrath and Fred Hausman, was held at Phoenicia Thursday night.

The town hall at Phoenicia was packed for the hearing, which was before the town board of the town of Shandaken. The full board was present, consisting of Clarence T. Voss supervisor; Leon B. Buley, town clerk; Theodore A. Voss, Theron E. Townsend, Edwin Marsh and E. Winfield Misner, justices of the peace.

Supervisor Voss presided at the hearing, which lasted until nearly one o'clock this morning. Appearances were: Frederick E. W. Darrow for Charles E. Ford, the petitioner; County Attorney Robert G. Grove for the Shandaken town board; the Hon. Charles W. Walton for the Water District; Arthur B. Ewig for Commissioners J. J. McGrath and Fred Hausman.

Eleven persons whose names were signed to the petition circulated by Mr. Ford, the petition having borne some 80 names in all, asked to have their names removed on the grounds that they had not fully understood the petition at the time of signing, or that their names had been placed on the petition by others. Some claimed that the purpose of the petition had been misrepresented and that they had been told that its aim was to regulate the flow of the Esopus.

The names were ordered stricken from the petition.

Attorney Darrow opened the case for the petitioners and called as witnesses the two commissioners. McGrath and Hausman and Harvey Clancy, a former commissioner, succeeded by Mr. Ford last spring. The witnesses were cross-examined by Attorney Ewig, who also called Mr. Ford as a witness.

The town board reserved decision in the matter until the testimony in the case, taken by William P. Glass, the stenographer, could be transcribed and the members had an opportunity to review it.

News of Today In Kingston

People used to tell time by the sun and they still gaze skyward but it's not for the sun. It's for the airplanes. They're telling time by the airplanes.

The planes that fly up and down the Hudson river over the New York to Albany air mail route, fly on such perfect time that people have come to depend on the planes for the correct hour.

This is known to be a fact. There's a plane that passes up the river at Something like 11:15 o'clock in the morning. That's one of the signals for the clock.

Cloudy days have their disadvantages. Like the sun, the planes disappear and so the clock must go for a day without checking. Of course, sometimes a plane can be heard and not seen. The sound then is as valuable as the sight of the aircraft, and the clock gets its checking.

On the Hudson occasionally, when one happens to be fortunate enough to sail on its blue waters, a good idea is often presented as to the progress of travel.

For instance, a large oil tanker will be making its way up the river: not far off its bow will be a sail boat gracefully leaning to the wind: on the bank will be a fast train bound either north or south, and up above will come the drone of a tri-motor mail plane carrying both mail and passengers.

There in a single glance many years of progress can be gazed upon. There, too, is represented long years of dreams and toil. For centuries the steam engine was dreamed of but the most fantastic dream of all was the airplane.

Which is the most spectacular? The sail boat many say.

Girl Scout Camp Presents Diversion

The first two weeks' encampment at Camp Wendy, Girl Scout camp, broke up last Saturday. However, many of the Girl Scouts, having so thoroughly enjoyed the first two weeks, remained for the next encampment.

The weather this year has been ideal for camping, which with the complete recreational equipment, has furthered the Scout activities and interest.

Each day the girls enjoy swimming in the lake, and classes ranging from beginners to life savers are held under the competent supervision of a Red Cross swimming instructor.

Instruction is also given in handicraft, nature study and all of the various educational divisions which make up the extensive Girl Scout program, offering the Scouts the opportunity for earning badges for proficiency in these lines.

Although Camp Wendy is open to Girl Scouts from Leonia, New Jersey, White Plains and Beacon, N. Y., Ulster county is well represented, and it is the hope of the Ulster County Girl Scout Council that every Girl Scout in the county may enjoy a week or two at the delightful camp at Wallkill, N. Y.

Killed in Food Quarrel.

Boston, July 22 (AP)—An argument over who opposed the greater capacity for food, ended in the death of Frederico Primio, 55. Police said Pasquale Sciarafa, 52, confessed he stabbed Primio last night in a quarrel over their claims to gastronomic capacity.

Ward Store Sale Draws Huge Crowd

There was no depression at the Montgomery Ward and Company store on Fair street today when their "Red Spot Sale" was in progress. Long before the store opened at 8 o'clock there was a crowd waiting in front of the store and at the time of opening this crowd had assumed such proportions that Manager Tweedie called on the police department for two officers for duty in the store to handle the crowds.

From the time of opening there was a constantly increasing crowd in the store and shortly before 10 o'clock it was necessary to close the doors temporarily and permit those already in the store to be served before more shoppers were admitted. As some left the store others were admitted to take their place.

James Reilly, advertising manager of the local store, stated that the sale had been far more successful than had been anticipated and that it looked like pre-depression times. "This sale is the biggest thing we have ever had at the local Montgomery Ward and Company store. We did not anticipate any such crowds but we have plenty of help and the huge crowd is being handled [illegible] minimum of delay" said Mr. Reilly. "Instead of there being a rush at the opening hour which fell off during the day, the attendance became better as the morning advanced, making it necessary to close the doors and admit a few of the people at a time," said Mr. Reilly.

That Prankish Urge to Do "Forbidden Things"

It is sometimes just as well ever for small boys to temper obedience with discretion.

The other day an ingenious youngster was charged with giving a false alarm of fire. His defense was that the notice on the fire alarm said "Break the glass," and that he followed instructions.

Blind obedience, however, is not normally a characteristic of human beings, of whatever age and one of the things which sometimes tempt otherwise quite normal people to pull the communication cord on a train is the fact that they know they mustn't do it. Similarly, notices that a thing is "forbidden" often arouse a wild desire to do it—though there was no thought of it in your mind until you saw the notice.

It is an awkward problem for railway companies, municipal authorities, and others who have to deal with humanity in the mass.—Exchange.

His Wonderful Acre

I asked an old gardener how much land he had. He replied with pride that he had one acre. He added: "And it is a wonderful acre. It reaches to the center of the earth in one direction, and it takes in the stars in the other."—L. E. Bailey.

Financial And Commercial

New York, July 22 (AP)—With rails proving the motive power, and oils the fuel, the stock market negotiated another modest grade today, getting up close to the peak levels of June.

The announcement of the Interstate Commerce Commission's approval of the four-party Eastern Trunkline merger, with only minor modifications of the executives' plan, had a beneficial effect upon the carrier securities generally, and oils improved in response to first samples of first half earnings.

Of the eastern trunklines, stocks of Baltimore and Ohio and Chesapeake and Ohio made relatively the best progress, getting up a point or more. Delaware and Hudson, normally a wider mover, advanced more than 2. New York Central and Pennsylvania rose about ½ point. Among other rails, Union Pacific and Santa Fe gained a point or so. In the oils, Standards of California and New Jersey, Seaboard Oil, and Atlantic Refining gained a point or so. Miscellaneous shares rising about 1 to nearly 2 points included American Telephone, American Can, Case, Proctor and Gamble, National Biscuit, Air Reduction, Eastman, Homestake, General Railway Signal, National Distillers and U. S. Steel Preferred. The list sagged a little after a firm opening, but soon resumed its climb.

The way the market was able to push through its previous upper resistance levels of July was regarded as encouraging. The upturn took the general level, as measured by averages, up close to the peak of the early June rally, which greeted the formation of the Morgan-sponsored bond investing corporation.

The earnings report of Atlantic Refining for the second quarter and the first half provided substantiation of advance estimates indicating the improvement in gasoline prices had carried the industry generally out of the red. Atlantic Refining's net for the first half was $1,18 a share, of which $1.02 was earned in the second quarter. For the full year 1931, the company showed only 19 cents a share on the stock. A number of adverse statements are appearing, however. For instance, Johns Manville showed a loss of $602,670 in the second quarter, a somewhat smaller loss than in the first, but contrasting with net income of $715,647 in the second quarter of last year.

Still Much to Learn About Science of Food

If you can't leave your children a fortune, you have done something if you leave them ten more years of life than you had. We know the modern theory so often crystalized as a witticism that to live lengthily, select a healthier grandfather and grandmother who were long in the land. But one's years may be amplified by reasonable application of the laws of health and his children's extended by drilling them in the rules, F. H. Collier asserts, in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Let no boy grow up insisting on a dinner consisting of three pieces of pie and a cupful of coffee; nor is he very likely to grow up. The science of food and what the varieties of it do to one's constitution is still one largely of guesswork; but the doctors are finding out. In time they will know and can tell you exactly what is the matter with your teeth, your digestion, your lungs or your eyesight. Foods have something to do with this.

United States Classed as Industrial Nation

Throughout most of the history of the United States farming was regarded as the basic industry. With the rise of manufacturing, particularly since 1900, the value of manufactured products has exceeded the value of farm products. Today only a fraction of working people are employed on farms, whereas earlier in our history nearly all were so employed. While farming remains practically indispensable, it no longer is the basic industry. If a single industry were to be selected among the manufacturing industries it would be steel as that includes iron and coal. The United States now is classed as an industrial rather than an agricultural nation. Many states, taken individually, would still show farming as the basic industry. For the world, agriculture must still be regarded as basic, as from agriculture must come the food of the people, without which there could be no other industry.—Washington Star.

Long Journey

Things are seldom so bad that they cannot be worse, and this must be the consolation of those who, continually made the butt of others for some peculiarity, come across a victim of circumstances suffering from the same peculiarity in a more exaggerated degree. The French Marshal Vivonne once indicated this feeling in a witty reply to the king. Vivonne and the Comte d'Auvergne were probably the most corpulent gentlemen of the court at the time. "Marshal, you really are getting too fat," said the king. "You ought to take more exercise." "Your majesty does not know, then, that I take a great deal of exercise?" "No; what do you do?" "I walk around the Comte d'Auvergne three times every day."—Washington Post.

New World's "Discovery"

Some historians of the Roman Catholic church are of the opinion that their missionaries reached the western hemisphere before the discovery of America by Columbus. They claim that documents from the Vatican archives, which were published in 1893, contained information concerning the diocese of Gardar, in Greenland. This first Catholic diocese in the New world was established about 1125 and had resident bishops until 1377. However, other historians claim that the church of San Nicholas, in Santo Domingo, which was founded by Governor Ovando in either 1502 or 1508, is the oldest Christian church in the New world.

For Obstinate Windows

When windows are inclined to stick when efforts are made to raise them, rub their cords with soap and then run them up and down a few times. That will solve the problem.

If Rainy, Bouts Will Be Held Monday Night

Matchmaker Doc Studer at 2 o'clock this afternoon said that the American Legion boxing bouts would go on this evening as scheduled if weather permitted. At the time of the announcement there was a drizzling rain but Studer was in hopes that it would clear before fight time, 8:30 o'clock. If rain forces postponement the bouts will be held Monday night.

POULTRY

SAVE THE POULTRY BY KILLING MITES

Simple Treatments to Get Rid of Lice.

(By O. C. UFFORD, Extension Poultryman, Colorado Agricultural College—WNU Service.)

Many Colorado farmers and poultrymen save money and cut costs of production simply by preventing their poultry and poultry houses from becoming infested with lice and mites.

Lice and mite infestations affect the health, growth and production of poultry. These pests can be easily controlled by proper action. Lice, which live on the birds and are known as biting parasites, may be controlled by smearing a small amount of blue ointment mixed with an equal amount of petroleum jelly, lard or vaseline, around the vent. This treatment should never be used on small chicks. Dusting powders such as sodium fluoride may be placed in the feathers on different parts of the body to control lice.

When large flocks are to be treated for lice, nicotine sulphate may be applied with a brush or oil can to perches before the birds go to roost. Fumes from the nicotine destroy the parasites. This fluid will also kill mites if they come into contact with it. Badly infested flocks should be treated a second time in about ten days.

Mites live around perches and roosting places, gradually spreading over poultry houses and farm buildings when not controlled.

Stock dips, formaldehyde or carbolic acid are some of the common materials used for spraying roosts and houses. An effective home remedy can be made by using one gallon of crude crank case oil, one-half pint of stock dip or crude carbolic acid, and, if necessary, this may be thinned with one to two quarts of kerosene. The easiest time to control mites and lice is in the spring, before they become too numerous.

Flock Will Respond to Well-Balanced Ration

Eggs from chickens fed a ration full of vitamins A and D are better food than eggs from chickens fed rations less rich in these vitamins, according to the results of recent research available to the department of poultry husbandry at the Ohio State university.

Recent experiments indicate, says the department, that the amount of vitamin A and D supplied to the birds is directly reflected in the vitamin content of the eggs produced. Thus, in feeding his hens to maintain their health, the poultryman is feeding for eggs of better quality and more worth.

A ration for hens rich in vitamins would contain yellow corn, alfalfa leaf meal, or a high grade cod liver oil.

Vitamin D prevents rickets and assists with the building of bone. Vitamin A builds resistance to disease and infections.

Early and Late Chicks

Chicks hatched early have many advantages over those hatched late. As a general rule they are more vigorous; the mortality is less; the cockerels may be sold for better prices, and the pullets will mature in time to lay high-priced eggs next fall.

Just why the early chick is more vigorous is hard to explain. That less mortality is experienced is probably due to the fact that coccidia and parasites, such as worms and mites, are less active before the onset of hot weather. It is true that more trouble from these pests is experienced later in the season.

Poultry for Income

Science has placed the rate of mortality among chicken flocks so low that it is now no longer a major risk. As an income source, both from meat and eggs, poultry offers returns measured fairly accurately by the number of chicks to be used. The initial investment in equipment is offered today at most attractive prices and since the life of equipment extends over a long period of years, the annual investment may be considered very low.

Select Vigorous Chicks

Vigorous baby chicks have full bright eyes, downy fluff, are plump and have well rounded shanks. Other points to look for in selecting chicks include the following: Freedom from bacillary white diarrhea, weight of eight pounds per 100 chicks at 24 hours of age, well healed body openings at which yolk was absorbed and richly pigmented shanks and beaks. Chicks from healthy breeding flocks and from birds high in egg production are always preferable.—Nebraska Farmer.

Diarrhoea in Fowls

Diarrhoea may be caused by feeding spoiled food of some kind and garbage should be pretty carefully inspected before being fed. It may easily contain spoiled bits of meat or moldy food of some kind. A dose of epsom salts, one pound dissolved in the drinking water of 100 fowls, or dissolved in a little water and mixed with a wet mash, so distributed that all can get their share, may be given to clean out the digestive organs of the birds.—Rural New-Yorker.

Philanthropist Remembered

Probably the only case of its kind in history is the tribute paid to the memory of Edward Colston, a philanthropist buried in Bristol, England. The schools, homes and hospitals which he founded have placed fresh flowers on his grave every week for the past 200 years.—Collier's Weekly.

America And Germany Even In Cup Matches

Stade Roland Garros, Paris, July 22 (AP).—Ellsworth Vines, Jr., American and Wimbledon champion, today defeated Daniel Prenn, ranking German star, 6-3, 6-3, 0-6, 6-4 to give the United States an even break in the first day of play in the interzone Davis Cup final.

The tall Californian playing easily and confidently completely outclassed the German engineer in all but the third set and Vines was taking a breather then and made little effort to win points.

Vines showed his resourcefulness in the final set as he turned to a lobbing game to defeat Prenn after he found himself inaccurate with his drives.

The fine play of Vines heartened the American supporters who saw Gottfried Von Cramm, second ranking German, spring an upset in defeating Frank X Shields, in the first match 7-5, 5-7, 6-4, 8-6.

John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, American doubles pair, are favored to defeat the German combination, as yet unnamed, in doubles tomorrow and on the basis of the day's play Vines should win from Von Cramm Sunday to send his team into the challenge round against France.

rmory Cornerstone Laid This Morning

The cornerstone of the new armory was laid this morning at 11:15 o'clock in a simple ceremony conducted by Major O. R. Hilzebrant, [illegible] Battalion, 156th Field Artillery, New York State National Guard.

There was no elaborate program for the event, because Governor Roosevelt, who was to have laid the stone, was unable to be present.

However, when the armory is completed it will be formally dedicated with ceremonies doing credit to the occasion.

In laying the cornerstone, Major Hilzebrant realized one of his greatest desires since joining the National Guard. For a number of years, prior to the breaking of ground for the new armory, the major persistently carried on a fight for the edifice now under construction. It will be wholly suited to the purposes of field artillery and will offer many attractions in a social way to those enlisted in the national guard.

Besides affording ample riding and drill space, the new armory will have a library, game rooms, a generous lounge, lockers and showers. With these attractions recruiting should be more than easy. Probably there will be a waiting list all the time.

The cornerstone laid this morning contains copies of Kingston Daily Freeman, Kingston Daily Leader, New York National Guardsman, the 1. C. Scope, regimental publication; letters of the Kingston units of the National Guard, directors of the board and executive officers of New York state.

Young, an industrialist, reparations expert and prominent in the affairs of the Democratic party, is scheduled to meet the Democratic nominee tomorrow for the first time since Mr. Roosevelt became the candidate.

"We will discuss a great many things, including the foreign situation."

Rebels Killed in Brazilian Fight

Rio De Janeiro, July 22 (AP)—The government announced today that Federal troops, in a battle with the rebel forces of Sao Paulo, had occupied the City of Ponso Alegre, in Minas Geraes, near the Sao Paulo border.

The battle extended a distance of sixty miles from Ponso Alegre to Ourofino and lasted eight hours.

A major of police and a member of the Reichs banner were arrested with him.

At Koenigsberg last night Karl Jaecker, Socialist member of the Reichstag, was severely beaten by a group of National Socialists despite a police escort which accompanied him as he left a campaign meeting.

There was another affray at Homburg where three policemen and seven others were injured.

FOUR PERSONS HURT IN ROXBURY CRASH

Roxbury, July 21. (Special).—Four people were hurt Wednesday afternoon when an automobile driven by Miss Margaret Proskine of Roxbury turned turtle, leaped a stone wall and finally came to a halt in the center of a large field.

The injured are Miss Margaret Proskine, who suffered a cracked rib and numerous cuts and bruises; Mrs. Augustus Klem, who was severly cut and bruised; the Misses Tillie and Jennie Proskine, who were severely shaken up but not seriously injured.

On going down the hill near the residence of Forbes Hitchcock a front tire blew out. The car turned over three times, climbed the wall and brought up fifty feet away in the hay field. The car escaped with little wreckage.

Mrs. Klem's husband was in a car immediately behind the wrecked one and he picked them up and rushed them to the home of Mr. Hitchcock for first aid. Later on they were able to return to Roxbury and are under the care of Dr. G. A. Gaul.

HOBOES PAY TRIBUTE TO DECEASED LEADER

Cincinnati, July 22 (AP)—Beside railroad water tanks and in "jungles" box cars and "flop" houses the nation's hoboes paused today to pay tribute to their departed leader and benefactor—James Eads How.

Today was the second anniversary of the death of How, a Harvard graduate who scorned a millionaire's life to ride the rods with the "Wandering Willies".

Jeff Davis, of Cincinnati, now "king" of the hoboes, has passed the word along the cross-ties to "commune today with the spirit" of the man who established the International Brotherhood Welfare Association that every hobo, tramp and bum might eat.

"Let us echo the name of James Eads How from pillar to post and all say a good word for one who never forgot others," Davis announced.

To Hold Excursion

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

By Editha L. Watson

JOHN OTHERDAY

Out in a cow pasture, some twelve miles from Wilmot, S. D., there is a lonely grave.

There is no headstone to tell who lies here. There are no lovingly-planted flowers to brighten the spot. Two or three small stones mark the location—stones which a child could roll down into the creek which flows by.

Yet in this little-noticed unkept grave lies the dust of John Otherday, hero.

He was a Wahpeton Sioux, born at the beginning of the Nineteenth century, and his early manhood was not what we would expect from heroes. Passionate and revengeful, he killed several of his tribesmen in drunken rages. Here, surely, was not the material from which good citizens are made.

Bravery, however, was a virtue which Otherday always possessed. In one of the fierce battles between those life-long enemies, the Sioux and the Chippewa, he carried a severely-wounded tribesman from the field, and later in the day saved the life of another. Thus the scales might be said to balance, for though he killed on one hand, he heroically saved on the other.

I do not know what changed Otherday into the man he became. At any rate, when he decided to become as nearly like a white man as an Indian could, he went at the task with the intensity he showed in everything. He became a devout church member, and dressed in white man's clothing.

This, perhaps, was not unusual in itself, but the "Spirit Lake massacre" proved Otherday to be a sincere friend of the white man. Inkpaduta, a hostile, renegade Sioux, with his followers killed the settlers at Spirit Lake, S. D., and carried off two white women, Abigail Gardner (later Mrs. Sharp) and Mrs. Noble. Otherday and another Sioux, a chief, offered to attempt a rescue, and followed the dangerous band at the risk of their own lives. Mrs. Noble died before the friendly pair won through to them, but Miss Gardner was released.

Otherday was fifty-six years old at this time. The exciting events of his life, especially this latest exploit, were enough for one person to have experienced, surely. He had married a white woman, and lived comfortably in a house built for him by the agent of his reservation. It is unlikely that he expected further adventures—he had certainly earned a peaceful life for his later years—and it is doubtful if he ever longed for other deeds of valor to perform.

But his service was not over; in fact, it may be said to have scarcely begun. The Sioux outbreak of 1862, in which hundreds of Minnesota settlers were tortured and killed, aroused the entire region. Something must be done, and done quickly.

John Otherday, Sioux, one of the very tribe whose anger had flamed forth in such dreadful might, heard the call again. He was sixty-one years old, but he knew that he must answer. There was a wilderness between the besieged settlers and Saint Paul, where they would be safe. The people needed a guide, lest they become lost and die as they fled.

Sixty-two white persons were gathered by Otherday. He led them through to Saint Paul safely, and then turned back to the frontier to offer every aid at his command.

General Sibley and his troops having been ordered to quell the uprising, Otherday became attached to them as a scout, fighting against his tribesmen. It is said that "no person in the field compared with him in the exhibition of reckless bravery." He dressed all in white, and it was his custom to go so far in advance of the troops that they often fired at him, mistaking him for an enemy.

Remember the age of John Otherday; it seems incredible that he could kill several younger men, Sioux warriors, and take their horses, but a man who had lived through adventures enough to fill several lives, found this feat not so difficult.

At the close of this war, the valiant old Sioux was granted the sum of $2,500 by congress. He bought a farm, and tried to succeeded at agriculture, but it was too late for the war horse to begin drawing a plow. Finally he moved to the Sisseton and Wahpeton reservation, where he lived only a short time, dying of tuberculosis, and was buried on the land which he had hoped to some day own.

There is a monument at Morton, Minn., erected in honor of Otherday and the three other Christian Indians who showed their loyalty so heroically during the Sioux uprising. But only now, more than sixty years after his death, a movement has begun to mark the grave in a fitting manner.

I suggest an epitaph for the stone: "Here lies the body of an Indian, which enclosed the soul of a white man."

"Inland Islands"

Britain's "inland islands"—land situated in one county but under the jurisdiction of another—will soon disappear, according to recent reports. Neighboring counties in which these "islands" exist have decided to exchange their "foreign" territories. The change will simplify administration work, but it is meeting some opposition from those who for sentimental reasons regret the passing of this "peculiarly English anomaly."

Seek Cause for Poisoning of 400

Washington, July 22 (AP)—Health officials sought today to find out if it was deviled egg salad that sent more than 400 picnickers to hospitals yesterday for ptomaine poisoning treatment.

The clue as to what had stricken the picnickers developed when two dozen exhausted would seekers also fell ill. Investigation showed some of the salad not needed for the picnic down the Potomac river had been sent to the veterans camp.

About 1,000 employes and guests of the Chestnut Farms and Chevy Chase Dairies attended the picnic.

RESIDENTS SUBPOENAED IN JOHN DOE PROCEEDINGS

Alexandria Bay, N. Y., July 22 (AP)—Thirty-three residents of this village have been subpoenaed to appear in John Doe proceedings before a Federal grand jury at Malone Monday to tell what they know of the alleged irregular activities of prohibition officers here last week incident to the injury of three Bay residents and a general flare-up of resentment on the part of the villagers.

Enforcement agents from the Syracuse office staged a series of raids here last week and aroused the anger of residents who charged the raiders with unnecessary destruction of property and gross negligence. After one of the raids a large and unfriendly mob surrounded the agents and two persons were injured by the Federal men's automobiles. Agent Bourke A. Bornemann of Syracuse was held on a reckless driving charge and was to have been arraigned tonight, but the case was ordered into Federal court.

Among those called were the mayor of the village, Dr. H. L. Gokey, G. W. Savage, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, who protested the raids to Washington, Chief of Police L. J. Estes and Peace Justice Charles Trickey. Miss Cora Bradley and Ross Visger, villagers injured by agents' machines, also were summoned.

There was an air of speculation as to the possible ramifications of the grand jury hearing today, some of the townspeople pondering the possibility that an attempt might be made to disclose evidence involving villagers in obstructing the agents in the discharge of duty or threatening them during the troubles of the past week.

INTER-PARLIAMENTARY UNION ENDS IN DISORDER

Geneva, July 22 (AP)—A session of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in the next room to the world disarmament conference broke up today in a violent row between the French and Italians and the police were called in to restore order.

The trouble started when the French Socialist deputy, Renaudel, objected when the Italian deputy, Costamagna, attempted to instruct the meeting on parliamentary procedure. Costamagna protested loudly and there followed a wild uproar during which Renaudel shouted: "Down with the assassins of Matteotti."

(The slaying of Giacomo Matteotti, a Socialist deputy, was one of the sensational events of the early Fascist regime in Italy.)

Third Dead Woman Committed Suicide

Lake City, Minn., July 22 (AP)—Death of a third woman today further aroused this area for a time but investigators decided she was a suicide and not connected with the mysterious deaths of Louise Prigge and Frances Polkowski, both 22.

With one hand on the wheel of her automobile and the other holding a pistol, Agnes Stevens, 22, of Melrose, Mass., was found dead near here today. She had a bullet wound in the head.

Miss Stevens registered yesterday for summer school at the University of Minnesota. She attended the University during the last school year.

Last night she attended a party in North St. Paul, where she roomed. Persons there said she left early but appeared to be in good spirits. No motive for suicide was known. Her father is Charles Stevens, of Melrose, Mass.

Officers attempting to establish how Miss Prigge and Miss Polkowski met death awaited reports from Rochester clinic specialists examining their internal organs.

GRANTS INJUNCTION PROHIBITING PAYMENT

New York, July 22 (AP)—Federal Judge Julian W. Mack today granted a temporary injunction prohibiting the payment of $1,500,000 interest on $50,000,000 of German bonds pending trial of an action by the Irving Trust Company, as trustee for the International Match Corporation for recovery of the bonds.

The injunction was directed against the Chase National Bank, depository of the interest money; Lee, Higginson & Co., fiscal agents for the German government, and five Swedish banks where the bonds are said to be on deposit.

The Irving Trust Company claims that the $50,000,000 in German bonds belong to International Match and were given by the late Ivar Kreuger, Swedish match king, as collateral on a personal loan.

Tiano's Home Run Wins for Butchers Over Taiclets, 6-4

A home run by Charles Tiano, coming with a man on base, enabled the Forst Butchers to nose out the Taiclet Boxmen, 6-4, in an extra inning game and take full possession of first place in the City League at the Athletic Field Thursday evening. The hit broke up a pretty pitchers' battle between Nick Huber and Dewey Van Buren.

In order to win the Butchers had to do a lot of uphill fighting and it wasn't until the last inning that they were able to score a run as Huber had held them to one hit 'till that time. It looked as though Huber was a sure winner for he had retired the first two batters to face him in that inning, but then things started to happen and before the inning was over the score was tied.

In the extra inning the Boxmen took the lead again, but the Butchers came right back in their half to score four runs and win.

It was a tough game for Huber to lose. The one hit made off him in the earlier part of the game should have been fielded. He was nicked for six hits in the last two innings, seven all told.

Van Buren, winning pitcher, was hit hard throughout, but managed to keep the hits well scattered and the score low. Ten hits were made off his delivery.

The Boxmen got off to an early lead, manufacturing one run in the first inning. "Kid" Moore scored the run, stealing home after he had singled, reaching second on a sacrifice and third on an infield out.

Georgie Gadd added another run to the Boxmen's run column in the third. He doubled to left field and scored on Moore's single.

Jack Robins was the batter to start the Butchers off in the last inning. He singled to left field and "Dutch" Glaser followed with a double to right field. Jim Voelker was inserted to bat for Tierney and obliged by sending in the tying runs with a bingle to left field.

Lutz Bruhn broke the tie in the extra inning, scoring on Tomaseski's double after he had singled to center field. Misove drove Tomaseski home with a single.

Huber issued his only pass of the game in the extra inning and it started the Butchers on their winning rally. Davitt received the walk and reached third when Merritt doubled to right field. Spiegel singled to score both runners and knot the score. Tiano then connected for his homer, which could have been held to at least a doubie if the ball had been fielded.

SIDELINERS

"Hank" Cragan was caught fast asleep off first base in the fifth inning.

"Muckie" Schwab made a circus catch of Glaser's fly in the second inning. He turned a complete somersault after catching the ball.

Jimmy Merritt undoubtedly saved the game for the Butchers in the last inning. He made a fine running catch of a long drive Schwab hit.

To whom it may concern: "Kid" Moore's name is not on the West Shore roster.

Tagging Major League Bases

(By The Associated Press)

The Boston Red Sox, up to a few weeks ago a demoralized, beaten team that threatened to break all existing records for games lost, are showing distinct signs of improvement under the guidance of Marty McManus.

They still do not look like a pennant threat, of course, and very probably will finish right where they have been ever since they started—a strong eighth—but there can be no doubt McManus has made progress since he relieved a discouraged Shauno Collins last month.

With Smead Jolley and Roy Johnson hitting far better than they did for the White Sox and Tigers, respectively, and the young pitchers coming through with a striking performance every few days, the Sox are winning a fair percentage of their games. They have won 10 of their last 22 contests and have been shut out but once in the last month. Boston fans, notoriously loyal when given half a chance, are said to be again warming up to the boys of Fenway Park.

Depending on Youngsters.

With most of the veteran pitching staff that finished the 1931 season scattered over the major and minor leagues, McManus is depending on a set of youngsters to pull the Sox out of the ruck. He's been springing some new kid pitcher nobody ever heard of about once a week, and he appears to have dug up some promising talent.

Larry Boerner, the rookie who yesterday held the Yankees to two hits in seven innings, is his latest find. It was only the second start for Boerner, who formerly was the property of the St. Louis Cardinals and recently was signed by the Sox as a free agent. Bob Kline, Bob Weiland, "Bull" Durham and Ivy Andrews are other promising sophomores on the staff. Kline shut Chicago out with two hits last week.

As well as he hurled yesterday, Boerner has yet to receive credit for a big league victory. Old Wiley Moore went the last two frames, in which the Sox came from behind to win, 3 to 2.

Senators and Browns Win.

The Washington Senators regained fourth place in the American League by beating Detroit, 5 to 4, in their final. Monte Weaver had the Tigers stopped after the first inning.

The St. Louis Browns broke their losing streak of 11 straight when Walter Stewart pitched himself a four-hit game and defeated the Athletics, 5 to 3. Goose Goslin smacked two doubles and two singles in leading the Browns' attack.

In the National League's only engagement, the pace-setting Pittsburgh Pirates beat out the Phillies, 3 to 2, in the ninth to increase their lead to two and a half games.

Yesterday's STARS

(By The Associated Press.)

Walter Stewart, Browns—Held the Athletics to four hits to win, 5 to 3.

Larry Boerner, Red Sox—Allowed the slugging Yankees only two hits in seven innings.

Joe Cronin, Senators—His three hits and two runs enabled the Senators to lick Detroit, 5 to 4.

"Pie" Traynor and Lloyd Waner, Pirates—Their hits after two were out in the ninth scuttled the Phillies.

McGraw Describes Most Dramatic Play He Ever Witnessed

By EDWARD J. NEIL

New York, July 22 (AP)—It was late in the National League campaign of 1912 and the Giants, led by a swashbuckling, fighting fury named John McGraw, were locked in a bitter stretch duel for the pennant with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

They warred through a final crucial series in Pittsburgh and the Giants came down to the ninth inning of this final game leading by a single run. Victory there meant enough margin to nurse through the final dash to the flag. Then something went wrong.

The Pirates rallied, filled the bases. Two were out. A storm was sweeping in over Forbes Field. It was getting dark. Christy Mathewson fiddled in the pitcher's box and waited, tired, for the help of the storm and the gloom that would make his fadeaway a phantom bit of horsehide slipping past the knees of the final batter.

The wind was whipping in across the outfield, and as Matty took one last look behind him he could scarcely see his outfielders against the storm clouds swooping down. He wound up. The batter lunged. He met the ball, a screaming liner that flashed to the right of second base and out toward the darkness of right center.

"The runners on those bases poured for the plate," said John McGraw as he sat back in his chair in the Giants' business office reminiscing. "Matty's head dropped and he turned his back. I started to turn away.

"Suddenly there came the terrific crash of the first bolt of lightning as the storm broke full on. For the brief flash of a second it lit up the field, and there outlined against the zig-zag flame, his face contorted, leaping high into the air, was our rightfielder, Red Murray, the ball just setting into his glove."

And that, sighed John McGraw, was the greatest and most dramatic play he ever saw on a baseball diamond.

McGraw a Fighter

Wandering back over the years with the most colorful leader in baseball history, you feel nothing but wonder that the white-haired, gentlemanly, soft-spoken man of 60 who sits so contentedly in the business offices now could have generated in his heyday the truculence and lust of battle for which he was famous.

When a decision was close, and the umpire hesitated or ruled against him, there would come that human bolt from the bench, McGraw. Out of the dugout would pour the benchwarmers, a phalanx about him, while his warriors stormed in from the field to shout at his side.

In Chicago and Cincinnati, particularly, as he was an even bet in the old days to promote at least a couple of modest riots each series.

But he knew how to avoid banishment, and the threat of suspension, while creating the impression that murder was about to be done.

"Don't let them disturb you," he'd shout to the umpire, his arms waving frantically, stirring the fans into an uproar. "Let's get this game over. I want my supper."

Loved To Win.

The joy of winning that dominated him up to the time he stepped out of a uniform in 1922 and managed the Giants from the bench in civilian clothes was never shown more clearly than in an incident that occurred one evening as the Giants were pulling out of Cincinnati after a particularly red-hot series. The Giants and the Reds were bitter enemies and in those days every fan in Cincinnati seemed endowed at birth with a particular and lifelong hatred of McGraw and the Giants.

The train stopped at a tiny station just outside the city and McGraw, in an expansive mood with his ball players around him, spied a farmer sitting dolorously on a fence chewing at a straw. Some intuitive sense seemed to tell the pilot that here was a denizen of the section he could make uncomfortable.

He leaned out of the train window. "Who won the ball game today?" he yelled.

The farmer turned a lugubrious face and spat once.

"Reds lost," he mumbled.

McGraw's scream of delight could be heard almost to Cincinnati.

Expect Crowd At Pan-Am Game Sunday

It is expected that there will be a record attendance at the Saugerties road diamond Sunday afternoon to see the Pan-Ams and Colonials fight it out in a game that promises plenty of action. Both teams have large followings, indicating that there will be an unsurpassed turnout of fans on hand for the match. Starting time is 3 o'clock.

Opposing batteries will be Carpenter or Wilson pitching and Roosa catching for the Pan-Ams; Van Buren pitching and Rider catching for the Colonials.

On Sunday, July 31, the Colonials will travel to Athens for a game with the Laundrymen of that village. In this contest the players piloted by "Kid" Moore and Herbie Myers will face Judge Bernard A. Culloton who has not lost a game this season, pitching for the Greene county club.

American Legion Outdoor Boxing Bouts Tonight

With 1,000 bleacher seats available at a price reaching a new low for admission to boxing shows, Doc. Studer's American Legion fistic carnival in the new outdoor arena, Broadway and West O'Reilly street tonight is expected to be witnessed by a record turnout of spectators.

The show has been widely heralded throughout Ulster county and fistic fans from every community in the district will patronize the event it is anticipated. Besides the reduced admission price as one incentive for boxing enthusiasts to attend the program of bouts, there are some first class matches on the bill which should draw better than any ever before presented by Matchmaker Studer, an experienced man at the cauliflower ear business.

For the main event Studer has paired Jack Jerry Wright of Poughkeepsie and Jack Sullivan of Marlborough to fight it out for the heavyweight championship of the Amateur Federation of Sports Clubs of America. Wright at present holds the title and hopes to retain it. Sullivan is eager for the laurels and from all indications will fight better than ever to accomplish his desire. Six rounds is the scheduled route of the bout, but the attitude of the scrappers gives rise to the presumption that it may end earlier. Sullivan is the favorite, 7-5.

Supporting the feature are the following preliminaries:

Semi-Final

Buddy Emerson of St. Remy vs. Joe Turek of Kingston, 6 rounds.

Preliminaries

Johnny Law, Cementon vs. Charlie Carpino, Kingston, six rounds.

Charlie Smith, West Hurley vs. Mickey Raymond, East Kingston, 4 rounds.

Duke Wade, Kingston Point vs. Wild Bill Shafer, Malden, 4 rounds.

Jimmy Costello, Port Ewen vs. Tony Quintiana, Marlborough, 4 rounds.

Max Kohler, Germany vs Max Schuler, Poughkeepsie, 4 rounds.

The first bout will go on at 8:30 o'clock.

SPORT SLANTS

By Alan J. Gould
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

It has, indeed, been warfare in and around the big leagues this year.

With fists, knives and guns brought into "play," the hazards of the baseball business have become greater than ever. The life of a major leaguer now seems more subject to violence than aggressiveness.

Before the season began in the American League, Big Ed Morris of the Red Sox pitching staff, was fatally stabbed at a farewell party given in his honor.

There have, fortunately, been no more fatalities, but Umpire George Moriarty emerged from a brawl with the White Sox players quite damaged, and Catcher Bill Dickey, of the Yankees, subsequently landed a jaw-cracking blow upon the lower maxillary of Outfielder Carl Reynolds, of the Washington club.

The shooting of Bill Jurges, Cub infielder, by an excited girl friend, furnishes the latest episode to the record of violence.

If this sort of thing keeps up, the players will have a few more arguments to produce against any further reductions in salary, unless double indemnity clauses are inserted in the contracts.

Nurmi Trouble Ahead.

The whole issue of amateurism in athletics, more complicated than ever, is likely to explode when the Olympic delegates to the I. A. A. F. meet in Los Angeles just before the games to decide whether Paavo Nurmi is to be allowed to run his farewell race in the Olympic marathon.

Finland has threatened to withdraw its entire team if Nurmi is not permitted to compete, but this can be set down in advance as no more than a threat.

Nurmi has been suspected of irregularities, while on various tours, ever since he came to the U. S. A. after the 1924 Olympics. No direct evidence of any overt acts on his part was detected in this country, but he seems to have run afoul of amateur barriers in Europe.

Nurmi's present suspension is based on the charges of receiving excessive expense money; in effect, guarantees for running appearances. He denies the charges and Finland upholds him.

"Blow-Off" Looms.

It all seems to revolve around two conflicting viewpoints, one of which sees no harm in an amateur athletic star being compensated for his time as well as his expenses; the other holding strictly to the law against any monetary benefits.

If Nurmi's ban is not lifted for the Olympics, Finland and the countries friendly to it certainly will agitate for a wholesale house-cleaning in athletic ranks. The situattion, as it shapes up in advance, is ripe for a real blow-off.

Monfri Schedule For This Evening

Monfri Baseball League games are scheduled for this evening at 6:30 o'clock as follows:

Dairylea vs. Herzogs at the Kingston Fair Grounds.

Telcos vs. Triangles at the Athletic Field.

U. S. Chances Good to Win High Hurdles In Olympic Games

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

Los Angeles, July 22 (AP)—The United States not only should regain the Olympic high hurdles championship this year but finish 1-2-3 in the final, unless some mishap along the timbered 110-meter route befall. Jack Keller, George Saling and Percy Beard.

The home forces never have had a faster trio for this spectacular event. All have broken world records and Keller, running against the wind, tied the world mark of 14.4 seconds in capturing the final trial at Palo Alto.

Keller may not be the most stylish of our hurdlers but coachers agree he is the fastest man in the world between the barriers. There has not been much to choose between Keller and Saling, however, of this season's performances. Beard, 1931 national champion, has "rated" his early pace and is counted on to reach his peak in the Olympics. He won the national high hurdles a year ago in 14.2 seconds.

Not only is the American hurdling delegation stronger than in 1928 but the foreign menace seems weaker. The South Africans who ran our boys dizzy at Amsterdam—Weightman, Smith and Atkinson—are missing. The principal foreign contention this time seems due from the German Wegner, and the Finnish champion, Sjostedt, each with best marks of 14.4 for 110 meters.

From Europe and elsewhere, the visiting hurdlers seem more interested in and better equipped for the 400-meter race. This is the event Lord David Burghly won from our favorites, Morgan Taylor and Frank Cuhel, four years ago. The titled Briton is returning as captain of his team, to defend this honor with his customary courage and enjoyment.

Chocolate vs. Shea

Chicago, July 22 (AP)—Kid Chocolate is to defend his junior lightweight championship against Eddie Shea of Chicago at the Chicago Stadium August 4. The bout will be at ten rounds.

Kaye Don Sails for U. S. on August 10

According to an Associated Press dispatch from London, Kaye Don, British holder of the world's speedboat record of 119.81 miles an hour, will sail with his boat, Miss England III, August 10 for the United States and the Harmsworth Trophy races at Detroit, September 1 to 5.

Don says the coming test will be the hardest he has ever faced, but he pointed out that his new boat was built especially for the series and not merely for straightaway speed runs, as was the ill fated Miss England II, which turned over in the trophy competition last fall.

Gar Wood of Detroit, former record holder and defender of the trophy, has built a new Miss America X. Don fully realizes his formidable opposition.

Grube Explains Non-Appearance.

Don Grube today explained that the reason the team did not show up at Rondout Park Thursday evening to play the Kingston Firemen was because that club did not furnish transportation as agreed when the match was made. He said he and his forward rollers were waiting at the designated place for the car that was promised by the club, but it failed to arrive. Grube added that he and his men hope to get a chance to play the Kingston firemen in the near future and are ready to accept challenges from any team in the city or vicinity.

Life At Camp Crawford Affords Much Fun

Brown Station, July 22.—The joys of camp life are being pursued with undiminishing vigor at Camp Crawford on the Esopus creek, not far from the Flood plate and also not far from the Spillway bridge. When you behold their happy, carefree way of living close to the heart of nature, you wonder why all the native inhabitants of this beautiful region do not adopt the same mode of living, at least in the summer time. They could still do all their work just the same.

Among the regular camp activities are frequent long cross-country hikes. One day recently Miss Helen Crawford, director, and several of the campers rowed across the "Stillwater" Lake, struck out through the woods and traveled until they reached the Atwood road. Thence following the road they came around through Olive Bridge, past the pretty white church, which they admired very much, then through Brown Station and so on back home to their camp.

Among recent visitors to the camp were Mrs. Jane M. Ross of New York city; Mrs. Basil Ellison, Saugerties; Nathaniel Gross, Kingston; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Maines and the Misses Joyce, West Hurley; Mr. and Granville Bush, Brown Station; Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Kingston; Dr. Mark O'Meara and daughter, Kingston; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wendt, Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wendt, Jr., of Weehawken, N. J.

Spaulding Keator of New York city is expected Sunday to visit his daughters, Charlotte and Elizabeth, for the summer.

Week-end guests were Miss Anna Van Twisk and Miss Margaret Falconer, both teachers in Hoboken, N. J. They are enjoying an auto trip to Maine and stopped here to visit friends in the camp.

Saturday evening the guests and all the campers enjoyed a picnic supper on the rocks at the head of the lake. Supper was followed by games and songs. Miss Falconer, who is a Scout leader as well as a teacher, gave a very interesting talk to an appreciative audience on fish life indigenous to the "Stillwater." Thus a nature study lesson was given by one who understood her subject well.

In camp are several musicians who play the piano extremely well. Among them are Miss Marie Kern, Margaret Henry and Marian Weidner. Miss Elizabeth DeHart is a fine alto singer. All the musical activities are under the personal supervision of Miss Cora Besson, assistant director of the camp. Margaret Henry is taking vocal lessons from Miss Besson.

And so amid this musical atmosphere, intermingled with games, boating, swimming and hiking, the days pass swiftly on and memories of them will linger long in the minds of those who are spending the summer at Camp Crawford.

Satisfied Candle Can't Be Shot Through Door

The account of a correspondent's experiments on a barn door was of particular interest to me because of an experience I had, says R. L. Owen in the London Times. Having been told that a candle could be shot through a door, leaving a round hole, I was foolish enough to attempt the experiment. I put a cartridge into my gun without extricating the shot; but, being afraid of an explosion at that point, I did not place the candle close to the cartridge but put it in about an inch or so from the point inside one of the barrels. Having fixed a board about an inch and a half thick some yards away, I aimed at the center of it and pulled the trigger. The result was that the board was splintered, but when I looked at the gun I found that a piece of the metal about an inch square near the point had been taken clean away. Where it had gone to or the direction taken I could not say, but concluded that it was the result of the compressed air, as the candle had evidently choked the outward passage. I still retain the gun as a relic of the incident.

Creatures of Fable

Probably the best known of the fabulous birds of prey were the roc, which was a bird so enormous that it obscured the sun where it flew, and carried away men in its talons; the phoenix, which was a bird with a beautiful voice and a long tail like a peacock's, which was supposed to rise from the ashes of fire, and the harpy, which was a terrible bird with a woman's face and breast and great claws like an eagle's, which pursued men who had sinned.

Statistics Given On Auto Accidents

Figures compiled by the Statistical Section of the Bureau of Motor Vehicles of the state shows the alarming number of fatal automobile accidents. For the first five months of 1932 there have been 154 more fatalities over a corresponding period for 1931.

Statistics compiled by the bureau show some very interesting facts concerning the operation and operators of motor vehicles in the state. For the first four months of this year there were 13,136 collisions with pedestrians while 9,631 collisions were between cars. During this four months period 811 persons were killed in motor car accidents and 32,527 injured by this total of 26,412 collisions.

While the greater number of accidents happened during daylight the larger number fatalities were at night. There were 12,688 daylight accidents with a total death of 319 and the number of night accidents was 12,448 with a total of 373 fatalities.

Statistics show that more accidents happened between 1 and 6 a. m. and that the next "accident period" was between 7 and 8 p. m.

As to the days on which accidents happen Saturday leads with a total of 4,616. Next comes Sunday with 4,212 accidents and the figures show that Tuesday is the safest day to be abroad on the highways for that day shows the lowest number of accidents.

As to the cause of accidents the question of right of way comes first. There were 4,807 accidents in which right of way was involved. Wrong side of highway comes second and driving off the highway is third as the cause of accidents. Speed is the fourth cause in point of number of accidents reported.

Involved in accidents for the first four months of the present year were 34,685 male drivers and 1,531 female drivers.

Passenger cars head the list as to type of vehicle involved in accidents. Taxicabs come second with commercial cars trailing in third place. Street intersections have been the scene of the larger portion of accidents and by far the larger number of accidents happen on clear days when road surfaces are dry.

The most unlucky pedestrian, according to the figures, is the one crossing between intersections. In this class 3,474 persons were involved with a total fatality of 153.

GINGHAM GOWN IS STYLE'S FAVORITE

Simple Fabric Takes Lead in Fashion Parade.

The little girl in the gingham gown, celebrated in the sentimental songs of yore, has returned as the leader of the 1932 fashion parade.

Gingham isn't just something to wear to school any more. We've seen it in blouses and street frocks, in tennis dresses and pajamas earlier this season. And now comes the gingham evening gown. Believe it or not.

And it's making a great hit with the younger set, where the new order of the day is simplicity.

A gingham dance dress is of a checked imported gingham, in wine red and white. Its lines are simple with a molded empire silhouette, unbelted, following the lines of the figure. And its only ornament is a crisp white organdie flower at the bodice.

It has wide shoulder straps, arranged in a suspender fashion in back and it's about the smartest thing that has come along.

It illustrates the new trend of the best-dressed set, which frowns on ostentation and elaborate gowns, at least for this summer and hails with loud hurrahs the simple, old-fashioned fabrics that are riding high in the mode.

Y. M. C. A. Camp Has Large Enrollment

Camp Preumaker—The largest enrollment of the season opened the third week of the annual summer camp for boys at Camp Preumaker, conducted by the Kingston Y. M. C. A., with 49 campers and 10 leaders in camp. The average of one leader to every five campers, maintained at Camp Preumaker this season, is believed to be unusually high for a camp of this type. Equally noteworthy is the versatility of the staff. Every one of the six cabin leaders is also an instructor in handicraft, dramatics, nature study, Scout activities or athletics. Included on the staff are three senior and two junior life savers, of the American Red Cross. The entire staff plays baseball with the campers and goes on hikes. Eight different counsellors have led in the morning devotional service.

The camp council continues to show initiative and judgment in guiding the program activities. The position of cabin representative in the council has come to be regarded as a great honor. The new council elected this week consists of Eugene Donnelly, Erich Fuegel, Fred Marks, Bob Mellert, Paul Pekin, and Robert Van Valkenburgh.

Musical features have vied with stories, stunts and star gazing for the most popular campfire numbers. The leaders trio of Mr. Palmer, Francis Phillips and Paul Haas has contested with the campers' trio of Milt and Bob Cole and Heitzman, while instrumental and vocal solos by Peter Osterhoudt, Charley and Alfred Gumaer, and John Salvatore have also been enjoyed.

New campers this week are John Adsit, Robert Fiero, Erich Fuegel, Joseph Garland, Albert Gibson, Albert Greene, Edmund Greene, Alfred Holliday, Robert Mauerstock, Ivan Maxwell, Paul Pekin, Theodore Valenti, Donald Vanderlyn, Robert Van Valkenburgh, Alfred Wood.
